

EISENHOWER DEAD

Death ends struggle for life By United States' 34th president

DWIGHT DAVID EISENHOWER
... Oct. 14, 1890-March 28, 1969

WASHINGTON (AP) Dwight D. Eisenhower, commander in World War II of the mightiest armed force ever assembled and former president of the United States, died today.

The announcement of the general's death was made in a somber voice by Brig. Gen. Frederic Hughes Jr., commanding general of Walter Reed Army Hospital who said that Eisenhower had "died quietly at 12:25 p.m. EST after a long and heroic struggle," and that he had died peacefully.

Flags were immediately ordered to half mast in the Ypsilanti area.

"Mrs. Eisenhower and members of the immediate family" were nearby at the time of death, Hughes continued.

He added President Nixon, former President Lyndon B. Johnson and Eisenhower's two brothers had been notified. Nixon meanwhile drove from the White House to the hospital. The White House said he would have a statement, a message to Congress and a proclamation later.

The 78-year-old five-star general, known as "Ike" throughout the world, was hit by congestive heart failure March 15 and again last Monday while recuperating from an intestinal operation and pneumonia complications.

With the rugged constitution of a Kansas farm boy, he already had battled back from seven heart attacks before undergoing surgery for an intestinal obstruction Feb. 23.

Four days after undergoing the high-rank surgery, he contracted pneumonia. Doctors successfully combatted the pneumonia with antibiotics.

But throughout the February trouble, it was Eisenhower's heart which caused doctors their prime concern.

Doctors made no mention of the congestive heart failure March 15 until after Eisenhower's wife, Mamie, said at a party the general had endured a "particularly bad" day.

Reporters questioned the hospital and were told of the latest onset of heart trouble.

Eisenhower had been hospitalized since last April 29, when a heart attack felled him in California after a round of golf. He was transferred to Walter Reed and there suffered three more, his seventh coming on Aug. 16.

Since then he had gained vigor, walked short distances, received President Nixon and former President Lyndon B. Johnson, and grinned his famed and folksy grin from a hospital window when an Army band, observing "Salute to Eisenhower Week," serenaded him on his birthday Oct. 14.

The body will lie in state, first, at the Washington Cathedral for one day.

Then it will be borne by caisson—at slow march and to the roll of drums—down historic Constitution Avenue to the Capitol, where the public will be permitted to file by the bier in the Rotunda for 24 hours.

On the third day after death, under a plan drawn in 1966, the remains will be taken back to Washington Cathedral for funeral services. The President, vice president, heads of state and other dignitaries will be invited.

Finally, the body will be taken to Abilene, Kan., his boyhood home, for burial at the Eisenhower Library.

Eisenhower Popularity Unmatched

Grin, nickname Appealed to all

WASHINGTON (AP) — From the day he entered West Point as a plebe to the day he left the White House 50 years later, Dwight David Eisenhower achieved personal popularity seldom matched in America. His grin and folksy nickname were his hallmarks.

PCHA to raise rates To offset higher costs

By WARREN EDWARDS
Of The Press Staff

Faced with an anticipated increase of $3.1 million in operating expenses, directors of the Peoples Community Hospital Authority voted last night to raise the average daily room charges by $3, effective July 1.

That would put the average charge for semi-private rooms at $40.

Controller E. J. Mathia said employee salaries amount to 72.2 per cent of the total operating expenses. He also said operating expenses at Beyer Memorial Hospital were expected to go from $3,321,200 to $4,099,200, an increase of 23.4 per cent.

However, he added, Beyer is an expanding hospital and that more employees are going to be added. Salary increases were recently approved.

Over-all, the revised 1969 budget for the four hospitals operated by PCHA is going from $19.4 million to a projected 1970 budget of $22.5 million.

In a presentation to directors meeting at Annapolis Hospital last night, Treasurer Roger J. Remer said:

"Costs have gone up dramatically, both locally and nationally, but PCHA has done much to hold the line to a considerable degree."

He said the four PCHA hospitals experienced an average per day cost increase of $6.89 last year compared to a national average of $7.18.

Remer said that in 1968 the national average was 272 employees for every 100 patients cared for in a hospital. In February, 1969, he said, the PCHA ratio was 255 employees per 100 patients.

In other actions the PCHA board approved:

Murder Suspect Rumored

Strangler case Suspect checked

By JOHN H. COBB
Of The Press Staff

Funeral services were held at 10 o'clock this morning in Romulus for Maralynn Skelton, 16, whose nude body was found Tuesday morning, the victim of a brutal and sadistic murderer.

While services were under way, police in Ann Arbor intensified their search for the killer of Miss Skelton.

Among the persons being checked as possible suspects is a man once questioned by police in Boston as a suspect in the Boston Strangler murders.

It was reported today that the police have investigated the young man's background in Massachusetts over the past eight years, but lack any direct evidence linking him to the Boston deaths or the four deaths in the Ann Arbor area.

The young man, in his 20's, was given the name of "David Parker" in Gerold Frank's book, "The Boston Strangler." He is said to be an undergraduate now at the University of Michigan.

Albert DeSalvo is the confessed Boston Strangler.

It was revealed today that the young high school dropout was seen in Romulus Monday at 12:40 a.m. She had previously last been seen around 1 o'clock Saturday afternoon in the Ann Arbor area.

Police said she was sighted at a drive-in restaurant in Romulus and apparently was wearing the clothes which were found beside her in the wooded area northeast of Ann Arbor when her body was discovered.

It was not disclosed by police if Miss Skelton was alone when seen, if she was

County OK's Improved Huron Drive

By NANCY ABNER
Of The Press Staff

The County Road Commission yesterday announced plans to include proposed improvements of Huron River Dr. in its 1970 construction program.

The commission also formally announced its intention to resume work this summer on the widening of Packard Rd. to five lanes between the city and Ann Arbor.

In issuing its road development priorities for 1969-1970, the commission tentatively earmarked $200,000 to widen to four lanes the 1-mile stretch of Huron River Dr. west of the Ypsilanti city limits—however without the inclusion of traffic islands designed to create a boulevard effect in the 2.2 mile project.

City officials have been seeking to gain the county's commitment to the road improvement project despite the failure of a county-wide millage package last November which included the 1-mile portion of Huron River Dr.

"We're perfectly willing to commit ourselves to it," Howard G. Minier, the commission managing director said. He added that regardless of pressures to implement the project in 1969, the County Road Commission would not be able to participate in Huron River Dr. development this year.

Minier noted that the Ypsilanti area would benefit from the county's widening of Packard Rd. this year, adding that the commission could not afford to undergo both projects in 1969.

City Manager John G. Cartwright said today that the county's timetable for Huron River Dr. improvements will "dovetail very nicely into our project." He doubted if the city could begin work on the road program this year.

One major hurdle — Eastern Michigan University — must still be overcome before the road project can be implemented, Cartwright said. EMU, which has half the frontage along Huron River Dr., must await legislative approval of the funds the city is seeking to assess from the institution for the improvements, he said.

There also have been indications that EMU may not commit its share of the assessments until the city agrees to close the west end of W. Forest Ave., where it passes through the main campus.

Minier did not rule out the possibility of including traffic islands in the county's portion of Huron River Dr. Minier told the County Board of Supervisors at its annual meeting with the commission yesterday that the islands would involve an additional $85,000 in construction expenses. Furthermore, he added that the county has only enough right-of-way land along Huron River Dr. to permit its expansion to a four or five lane road.

St. John's High To remain open

By DOROTHY LASKEY
Of The Press Staff

Come September there will still be a St. John's High School.

This morning before a special assembly in the school gymnasium, the Rev. Fr. William King, pastor of St. John the Baptist Catholic Church, announced that the Archdiocese in Detroit yesterday gave St. John's the "go ahead" to continue its secondary school program.

That was the go-ahead for 294 jubilant students to stand and cheer the decision.

Re-elect Richard Robb—Council, remember experience counts. Pd. Pol. Adv.

Civic Leaders Urge John N. Kirkendall for City Council. Pd. Pol. Adv.

Also addressing the student assembly was "Save the School" committee chairman Richard Gellott. He said the efforts of his 8-man ad hoc committee were prompted to action by the spirit of the student body. That spirit was evident at the assembly.

The committee had been formed to counter a recommendation that the school be closed at the end of this semester because of the staffing and dollar dilemmas that were working up.

The work of the committee had postponed a directive anticipated on March 1 from the archdiocese, which regulates school program within its 8-county area.

Five schools, including St. Mary's in Chelsea, were closed in that directive. Since then 15 more schools have been closed.

An internal canvass and pledges from the school's Dad's Club helped alter the "financial circumstance" which had seemed to be dictating the shut-down.

Indebtedness for the school had been figured as upwards of $60,000 through 1970. The recent pledge drive, however, has tallied funds to cover these figures.

Fr. King, Gellott, and William F. Anhut, a member of the "Save the School"

Smiles and happy shouts from St. John's students this morning replaced the frowns that marked their faces six weeks ago when they were told their school might be closing for good in June. The students were told this morning by Rev. William King (standing), pastor of St. John's, that the high school will open its doors in September for a new year and a new future.

PCHA directors oppose proposed laws

Directors of the Peoples
Community Hospital Authority (PCHA) last night voted their opposition to House bills that would restrict their authority.

One is House Bill No. 2974 that would give communities the right to withdraw from a hospital authority.

The other is House Bill No.
2824 that would do away with members at large in hospital authorities in communities with over 50,000 population.

T. E. Salisbury of Ecorse said the second bill was aimed directly at the PCHA and discriminated against it with the 50,000 population figure since the PCHA would be the only one involved.

Members at large are elected by representatives of the 23 municipalities connected with the PCHA.

Treasurer Roger J. Remer said that without the members at large there often would not be a quorum. He noted that of the 23 members present, five were members at large. He added that one was in Ann Arbor Hospital and could be called if needed.

Salisbury asked for and got a vote of confidence for the members at large.

Voting were Ypsilanti
Township representatives,
Henry J. Sturza and Edward
C. Hayes.

In speaking against the bill that would allow communities to withdraw from the authority, Attorney Charles Cuzzad argued that under the bill any community board could vote to withdraw while it took a vote of the people to enter.

He doubted that the bill is constitutional.

He said that in the past the Ypsilanti Township Board was not in favor of entering the PCHA but felt that it should be submitted to the people.

"It carried by a large number. But under the new bill any board could vote to secede," he said.

The attorney said the authority's power to issue bonds would be in doubt. "If a community drops out, any bond issue covering that community is dead," he said.

"You can't do any planning as you are doing here tonight if you can't depend on these communities."

PCHA directors voted that they would like to have a voice in any committee hearings in the House on the bill.

Washtenaw OEO Books discrepant

An audit of the County Office of Economic Opportunity agency for the fiscal year ending in July, 1968, has revealed serious discrepancies in the organization's financial records.

These discrepancies are serious enough that the county OEO agency is officially on "probation" with the OEO Great Lakes Regional Office.

"Due to the absence of many basic records, books of original entry, and supporting documents, we are unable to express an opinion as to the fairness of the accompanying combined statement of assets, liabilities and fund balances, and combined statements of revenues and expenditures as of July 31, 1968," wrote OEO Regional Director Alan Beals in a letter presented to the county's OEO's Citizens' Advisory Committee last night.

Noting that "the problems referred to are still present and require a solution," Beals added that his office "would have serious reservations about granting further OEO funds" until the agency's record keeping methods are improved.

The OEO Citizens' Committee, decided to consider hiring an accountant to help straighten out the agency's financial records.

Wallace Jungers, a representative from the Great Lakes OEO Regional Office in Chicago, told the group that his office would pay for the needed accounting personnel if the county agency lacked funds to supply the salary.

County Supervisor Donald Edmonds of Ypsilanti said that the county's auditing department could work with the OEO agency to overcome its bookkeeping problems, if the agency so desired.

Jungers further recommended that the county OEO hire on an accountant to work as financial consultant on a permanent basis with the agency.

County OEO Director Mrs.
Beverly Poindexter said that while the agency is working on operations through July, additional federal money will be needed by April 5 if the former WRAND Day Care Center is to keep in operation.

Taken over by the county
OEO last month, the day care center is now operating at Ann Arbor appoints Deputy police chief

A veteran of 24 years with the Ann Arbor police department has been promoted to the post of deputy chief.

Chief Walter E. Krasny announced the promotion of Senior Capt. Harold E. Olson, 46, to fill the post left vacant for four years when Krasny was promoted to police chief from the deputy chief's post.

Chief Olson joined the force in 1945 as a foot patrolman and has served in almost every position of command in the department. His new duties will include being an advisor to the chief, a line supervisor and division commander. As in the past, he will act as police chief in the absence of Chief Krasny.

The captain's position left vacant by his promotion will be filled after departmental examinations are given. Chief Olson was promoted to captain and named head of the detective division in 1964. In 1966, he was placed in command of uniform personnel.

Other positions which he held include: sergeant, promoted in 1949, uniform lieutenant three years later, headed the city's civil defense program and auxiliary police.

Coeds Flaunt Warning

Gals 'thumb' Despite deaths

Do the female students at Eastern Michigan University and the University of Michigan worry about their safety following the violent death of the second young girl in five days, and the fourth within 21 months?

Most of the young coed's generally express some concern but keep right on exposing themselves to the dangers which may have led to the deaths of four other young girls... hitchhiking.

Washtenaw Ave. between Ann Arbor and Ypsilanti has been devoid of female hitchhikers since the last murder, mainly because of cold, wet and snowy weather. However, the usual stream of hitchhikers is expected to resume their vigil as soon as warmer weather appears.

Most students take the attitude that "it can't happen to me," or, "It's daylight, nothing will happen." They failed to realize that "nothing could happen" to four other young girls — but it did.

Three of the victims were college students, two from EMU and the other from U-M. One had even posted a request on the student union bulletin board for a ride home — common practice in most colleges today, along with hitchhiking.

Lt. Melvin Fuller of the EMU campus police has tried to warn the coeds of the dangers of hitchhiking. "What can we do to convince them?" he asked. City police, sheriff's deputies and State Police all warn the young students that they are asking for trouble when accepting rides from strangers.

in a car, or any other facts concerning the sighting. The discovery of someone who had seen the victim now narrows the time period for which she was unaccounted to less than 36 hours. She was found around 11 Tuesday morning by a survey crew.

Described as a 3-year drug user and pusher for one year, the young girl had sought the help of Wayne County sheriff's officials to "kick" the habit. She reportedly dropped out of high school two weeks before she was killed.

Funeral services were private and were held with only the family in attendance.

Police continue to invade the world of hippies and drug addicts in which Maralynn had recently found a place. Her mother blamed her daughter's death on her association with hippies and users of drugs.

Mrs. Helen Skelton said she wanted people to know how her daughter changed after she got involved with the group. Maralynn was said to have been using heroin and other "hard" drugs.

Student Art show In bank

Art students of Willow Run elementary, junior and senior high schools will have their art works shown during coming weeks in the E. Michigan Ave. branch of the Ypsilanti Savings Bank. The exhibit will run until April 17.

The art exhibit was put up yesterday by the art teachers.

The teachers arranging the exhibit are, at Willow Run High School, Donald Reeves and Mrs. John (Shirley) Sautuci; at Edmonson Junior High, Mrs. Edwin (Sara) Cohen; at Edmonson, Holmes and Ford Schools, Miss Karen Segerson; at Thurston, Kettering, and Kaiser Schools, Mrs. Muriel Boelter.

About 80 to 100 works of art, three dimensional and two dimensional, were chosen to represent art students in the school system.

Gas company renovates

Extensive remodeling to the interior of the Michigan Consolidated Gas Co. showroom and business office on West Michigan Ave., is near completion after having begun in mid-December. The new interior, including the relocation of the business office, is designed to provide an improved display environment for merchandise and to facilitate customer access to the business service area, according to assistant general manager M. W. Lacy.

JYRO Signing Tonight

A special joint session of City Council and the Ypsilanti Township Board has been scheduled tonight for the signing of a joint recreational operations agreement.

The meeting, in City Hall, will begin at 7, and concerns only the one item of business.

The agreement will form the Joint Ypsilanti Recreational Organization (JYRO) designed to promote the development of Ford Lake as a recreational site. Ford Motor Co. has offered to donate the lake, which lies in both the city and the township, for use in recreation.

The Council announced Monday that it supported the proposal and it endorsed the proposed agreement as drafted by the city attorney and the township attorney. The Township Board voted 5-2 on Tuesday to support the proposed arrangement.

Hearing set On parole In murder

A hearing has been scheduled for April 1 by the state parole board on the request of Kenneth Basha for release from jail. Basha was convicted on Sept. 30, 1948, for the fatal shooting of a taxicab driver in the Willow Run vicinity.

A Washtenaw County court jury convicted Basha, then 22, on Feb. 4, 1949, of first degree murder. On Feb. 14 of that year he was sentenced to a life prison term.

A companion, William Swarthout, was sentenced to 25 years to life on a second degree murder charge.

Basha killed Francis R. Andrews, 27, of Detroit by firing four pistol shots at his head after ordering him to pull into the driveway of a farm house on N. Harris Rd. Ypsilanti Township.

Individual Study plans Are assessed

Bettering individual study programs was the goal of a 3-day conference at Roosevelt Schools. One hundred-fifty teachers, representing 44 school districts attended sessions this week. They are members of the Elementary School Improvement Committee of the Metropolitan Bureau of Schools Studies.

The Roosevelt staff presented a video tape on individualized programs and the use of programmed materials. Members also visited the learning laboratory where they examined materials and procedures and talked to students.

For retarded?

Beyer's future eyed

By WARREN EDWARDS
Of The Press Staff

The future of the existing Beyer Memorial Hospital — perhaps as a hospital for retarded children — was discussed last night at a meeting of directors of the Peoples Community Hospital Authority.

The matter came up in a resolution authorizing Dr. Karl S. Klicka, executive director, to seek an appraisal of the value of the existing Beyer Hospital and to "determine its most advisable use."

Extensive contract modifications in the new Beyer Hospital on S. Prospect St. were approved.

They would omit a conductive floor (grounded for sparks in the use of oxygen) in the emergency treatment room, revise the exercise room to include occupational therapy, add a cardiac care room and make revisions in intensive care facilities.

The total cost would be $28,945.

In asking for an appraisal on the hospital holdings, Dr. Flicka said Washtenaw County wished to take over PCHA holdings here.

Board Chairman D.J. Pizimenti had questions: "Keep it or not? Sell to Washtenaw County or the city? How much would the land be worth?"

Appraisal of the property was approved.

County in on Huron Drive

Noting the county's commitments to other road projects, Supervisor Howard A. Hand of Ypsilanti termed the boulevard islands "a luxury I don't think we can afford."

Also included on the County Road Commission's 1969-1970 construction prospectus is $330,000 planned for the widening of 3.24 miles of Packard Rd. between Ann Arbor and Ypsilanti to a 5-lane route this year.

Minier said that while the commission is definitely committed to the Packard Rd. project, the stretch between Carpenter and Brookside Rds. might not be fully completed this year if federal funds could not be received at this time for the full $350,000 requested amount.

Other Ypsilanti area road improvements planned for 1969 are: improvement of the curve of Whittaker Rd. to Textile Rd., and surfacing of Goldside Dr. from Clark Rd. to Washtenaw Ave. Whittaker

Rd. is also slated for further improvements in 1970 on the 2.23-mile stretch between Bemis and Textile Rds.

In its 2-hour meeting with the supervisors, the County Road Commission presented a proposed 1969 budget of $3,080,000. Last year's budget expenditures for the agency totaled $2,496,547.48.

Highlighting yesterday's annual supervisors-commission meeting was a luncheon commemorating the Washtenaw County Road Commission's 50th anniversary.

M-STEP meets at WR

Representatives from public school districts, colleges and universities within Region 6 of the Multi-State Teacher Education Project (M-STEP), met today in the Willow Run School District administration building.

Willow Run Superintendent Edwin T. Gray, a member of the M-STEP Region 6 committee and host for the session, said the purpose of the organization is recommending possible modifications and changes in college teacher education programs.

Region six includes Washtenaw, Hillsdale, Monroe, Lenawee and the western portion of Wayne Counties. Local districts represented at the meeting were Van Buren, Lincoln, Ypsilanti, Willow Run and Ann Arbor.

Tomic flirts with far left In Chile's election prelims

Latin politics frequently takes on a characteristic of its own as splinter parties negotiate restrained but working coalitions designed to bring them to political power. Some of these coalitions remain in effect for a period of time, others dissolve almost as quickly as they formed.

In the current Chilean 1970 presidential election preliminaries, however, a coalition proposal has been made which could have serious repercussions, not only in Chile but throughout the region.

A leading contender for the presidency, Radomiro Tomic, has declared that he will not be a candidate on his Christian Democrat ticket unless he has the support of the Marxist left. Tomic, who was Chilean ambassador in Washington for almost four years, has considerably clouded the race by his open invitation to the communist elements to join in his candidacy.

In the 1964 presidential election, Christian Democrat President Eduardo Frei came to power by offering his ticket as the only alternative to Marxism. Frei promised a far-reaching program of social reform within the framework of democracy. During his term he has worked to implement that promise.

The "revolution in liberty" Frei instituted has been heralded throughout Latin America as the answer to Castro style revolution, and perhaps the final test of the Alliance for Progress concept. All that now is being swept aside by the Tomic flirtation with the extreme left.

Perhaps nothing will come of it. The Marxists in the past have disdained coalition movements, and they have not yet indicated their reaction to the Tomic proposition. Even with Marxist support, Tomic may lose enough of his Christian Democrat backing to give the election to another candidate.

But as long as a coalition government based on partnership with the Marxists exists as a possibility, much of Latin America will be sitting on the edge of a tinderbox with a high potential for similar arrangements in a number of countries.

Labor report

Teamsters are doing well, Don't need Hoffa's help

WASHINGTON — There was no joy in Mudville when word flashed that Jimmy Hoffa might get out.

There was no glee in the Teamsters' marble hall when the Supreme Court, down the street, ruled that the imprisoned union president should be granted rehearings on both his convictions, totaling 13 years.

Teamsters are allergic to prison and they'd certainly like to see "Jimmy" paroled — but retired to comfortable privacy or a corporation executive job somewhere. Mighty few officials want him back as president.

The little fellow, now a model shoemaking, mattress-making prisoner, simply would get in the way of their new national goal — the building of the first massive labor conglomerate in the U.S., before the AFL-CIO launches its own conglomerates.

George Meany, AFL-CIO president, already has indicated — and it's been completely overlooked and unreported — that the big 14 million - member labor federation plans its own mergers to match the Ling-Temco-Vought trend in American industry.

In effect, the Teamsters are already there. They've been growing, without pains, while Jimmy Hoffa has been in prison. The Brotherhood has organized several hundred thousand new members in the past few years and now report they have 2.1 million dues payers.

And they've saved their money. When President Hoffa went manacled into the snow on his first mile to Lewisburg, Pa., penitentiary, the Teamsters had total assets of some $64.1 million. Now their assets roll upward of $73.5 million. This, it seems, runs them third to the United Mine Workers and the United Auto Workers, depending on who reads the balance sheets.

And they move in the best circles. Last month, Secretary of Labor Shultz invited acting general President Frank Fitzsimmons to come over and get acquainted. Jimmy Hoffa could not have gotten in on the rump of an ABM rocket. But Fitz and the secretary talked for an hour on the afternoon of Feb. 11. When the jovial Teamsters chief finally walked out, truly hung up on rarified cabinet rank environment, he said:

"I told him to feel his way. He dropped into the job just like me."

Small wonder he was up tight on this thing. A Teamsters chief executive has not talked privately with a Secretary of Labor since blue-eyed bald-pated Dave Beck. Jim Hoffa could never make it for many reasons.

Obviously Mr. Hoffa no longer is chismatic. Obviously if he returned to the Teamsters presidency, the organization never could return to its recently won place in the official sun. Obviously Attorney General John Mitchell would crack down on the Brotherhood, behead him or not.

But without "Jimmy," the Teamsters will be on their way to conglomerate much of American labor. Already this union spreads across (and not as delivery men) broadcasting, movie making, baking, steel hauling, the service industry, banking, Wall Street investment and fantastic real estate developments, each worth tens of millions of dollars.

And with Walter Reuther, the Teamsters hope to move into the low cost assembly line type of housing construction labor. Brotherhood leaders move in glamorous and even intellectual circles these days.

They see their image changing, their assets ballooning to $100 million at the national headquarters alone, their membership rolling on to three million.

And they see Jim Hoffa's visage blurring their vision. Small wonder there was no joy in Mudville when word came that the mighty Hoffa might strike out on his own again.

Reader asks rule of reason

TO THE EDITOR:

This letter is addressed to the black community of Ypsilanti. This community consists of at least two parts — those who reason and work and sometimes struggle with the white community to obtain equal opportunity and treatment, and those who refuse reason and disdain contact with whites.

A situation exists in our schools which is growing more dangerous. Generally the races have polarized, and dislike for each other seems to be growing. Certainly a lot of the blame belongs on white shoulders, but more and more is due to unreasonableness on the part of some blacks. For instance, when a black student picks a fight with my son, which is completely unprovoked, if my son does not fight back, he is a sissy and has no self-respect. However, if he fights, he is opening himself to reprisals from a group of blacks. Unfortunately the school authorities too often are caught in a similar bind. If they try to control black students they are opening themselves to criticism of being racists or in extreme cases to violent reprisals from blacks. Too often the school authorities take the easy way out of avoiding or ignoring the problems.

The net result is that white students are growing very resentful of blacks. If this trend continues it will result to the detriment of all. It will result in repressive action on the part of whites either inside the law or perhaps even outside of it.

My appeal is to the reasoning blacks of Ypsilanti. Are you willing to sit down with reasoning whites to discuss these problems? Are you willing to stand the taunts of unreasonable blacks? Are you strong enough to work with whites, and are we strong enough, to try to reverse the growing polarization in our community? If you are, then let us responsible blacks and whites meet together to discuss our mutual problems.

I am all for constructive black power, but realistically black power is most effectively achieved through education and development and use of talents and ability.

Stripp wins courage kudos

TO THE EDITOR:

Congratulations to Regent George E. Stripp, a member of the Eastern Michigan University Board of Regents, for his position against appointing a vice president "I have an abhorrence of every-time you have a problem, you create a new job," Stripp said, adding that "the goal of a university is to serve every student as a student and nothing else."

It is so refreshing to read one regent has had the courage to show some objection. Does this offer hope that maybe other regents might be enlightened? Do they really concur with the "police state" existence on campus? Do they now have the courage to serve as administrative regents rather than as a rubber stamp for Mr. Sponberg? Mrs. William C. Mother sides with teachers

TO THE EDITOR:

The "Kitchen Table Teacher" letter takes the cake! There are two professions filled to the very top with suckers — ministers and teachers! Why in the world anybody in their right mind would want to be a teacher at the low pay they get is beyond me.

If parents would begin acting like parents and keep their children away from the TV and get them to bed on time, perhaps they wouldn't fall asleep in class and tune-out the teachers. Also, the rude kids teachers are forced to put up with aren't worth the low salaries teachers get. I say that when truck drivers get $300 a week, and when all the public servants get twice the salary of a teacher, the parents better start looking at the fortunate side of having a teacher, good or bad, to take care of their little monsters. As a mother I can't wait to unload my kids after a hectic summer with them. I feel sorry for every teacher I know.

Washington Report

Eastland probes Conspiracy idea In King murder

WASHINGTON — An unpublished letter that James Earl Ray sent Sen. James Eastland (D-Miss.) is figuring prominently in the Senate security Subcommittee's inquiry into the assassination of Martin Luther King.

In the 2-page, hand written communication, Ray raised hints of a conspiracy in King's assassination by alleging that others in addition to himself were involved.

While he gave no specific details, Ray clearly indicated that he was ready to talk if permitted to do so freely under the protection of the court or a congressional committee.

Ray's carefully composed letter so intrigued Senator Eastland that he sent subcommittee investigators to Memphis, Tenn., to try to get the answers to these still unanswered questions:

How Ray knew that King was going to be in the Lorraine Motel? How Ray knew the location of King's room? How Ray knew King would come out on the balcony where he was shot? How did Ray know exactly where to go to get a room from which to fire the shot? Was Ray's eye sight good enough to have permitted him to fire the fatal shot?

This last question was raised by Sen. Eastland after his subcommittee received several reports that the convicted assassin's poor eyesight made it almost impossible for him to be King's killer.

Although state and federal authorities are known to have investigated these reports, their findings have never been made public because of the impact that they might have had on Ray's trial.

While Eastland still hasn't determined how far-ranging an inquiry his subcommittee will conduct, several persons involved in the Justice Department's probe of Ray have urged him to include the activities of one of the late King's mysterious associates.

This adviser, known to the Federal Bureau of Investigation as one of the top secret communists in the country, was the chief architect of the "Poor People's campaign" that King was to have led in the nation's Capital a year ago.

The mysterious adviser was also one of King's main writers and is believed to have drafted many of the speeches that the civil rights leader gave during the two months before his assassination.

According to an FBI informant, the mysterious adviser believed the country was ripe for a black-white civil war at the time and was looking for an incident to trigger the bloody conflict.

Still incomplete is an FBI investigation of this mysterious King associate's meeting with a group of Black Militants following the violent March 28 demonstration in Memphis in which a Negro youth was killed. It is considered significant that one of the persons that attended that meeting was also with King at the Lorraine motel on April 4, 1968, the day of the assassination.

In his discussions of the possibility of a conspiracy being involved in King's death, Sen. Eastland has taken the position that someone inside the motel had to finger King for the assassin. "It is obvious to me that someone inside the motel advised Ray," reported Eastland. "The mathematical odds that King would step from a certain room onto a

By

Special Writer

balcony directly in front of a would-be assassin are impossible to calculate. Only a man armed with details and accurate information would have positioned himself to fire the fatal shot."

Sen. Eastland has asked permission from Tennessee prison authorities to have his subcommittee investigators question Ray, who pleaded guilty to King's assassination for a guaranteed 99 year prison sentence, concerning how he knew where to find King on the day of the assassination.

Tennessee officials also have been asked by Eastland for access to files concerning their investigation of the granting of a duplicate driver's license on Feb. 28, 1968, for Eric S. Galt, an alias Ray used.

Since Ray has been positively located in California on that date, Eastland wants to know the identity of the person who called the driver's license division of the Alabama Highway patrol to order the duplicate license.

The duplicate was mailed to 2608 S. Highland, a boarding house where Ray had lived in Birmingham, Ala., before going to the West Coast. Eastland also plans to have his investigators question Ray about the driver's license application.

Man dies In huge Blaze

Oil tank feeds California fire

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Firefighters spraying fountains of foam today put out a huge oil and gasoline fire which killed a tanker truck attendant and burned 50 other persons—many of them spectators.

A county fire department spokesman said the fire in a fuel storage tank field was completely controlled after firemen snuffed out flames licking around a storage tank filled with one million gallons of gasoline.

Sheriff's Deputy John Barnick said the injuries to spectators would have been averted if they had heeded officers' warnings to move back. Barnick said that shortly after the warning a new explosion shot flames over a block-long distance, causing flash burns to many onlookers.

The flames had diminished Thursday night several hours after two explosions ripped the Fletcher Oil Co. refinery in the suburb of Carson, but burst suddenly out of control again this morning.

The fire centered in a pool of liquid encircling an already exploded butane tank.

Three 1.3-million gallon tanks and six smaller ones were set ablaze when a truck unloading fuel burst into flames Thursday evening, killing Myron Chase, 47, of nearby Long Beach.

As up to 200 firemen battled flame consuming jet fuel, diesel oil, butane, gasoline, naphtha, and crude oil, a second explosion blasted apart another tank.

North Vietnamese ambush Thwarted by aerial troops

SAIGON (AP)—The North Vietnamese tried to ambush a big U.S. convoy northwest of Saigon today for the second time in four days. But American armor, bombers and helicopter gunships drove them off and killed at least 46. Initial reports from the battleground, on the Ben Cui rubber plantation 45 miles northwest of Saigon, said three Americans from the 25th Infantry Division were killed and three wounded.

Enemy rocket grenades damaged one of the Army's new light Sheridan tanks, which was criticized in the U.S. Congress this week, and an armored personnel carrier. Ten miles south on Highway 19, hundreds of North Vietnamese tried to ambush another 25th Division convoy Tuesday. That time 85 of the enemy and two Americans were reported killed.

U.S. spokesmen said the North Vietnamese today either opened fire too soon or were spotted by tankmen a mile ahead of the 120 trucks of ammunition and food for the 25th Division base camp at Tay Ninh. The first shots were fired at the tanks and armored personnel carriers.

The North Vietnamese were about 10 yards off the highway, on both sides of it, behind the stumps of rubber trees. Because of daily convoys, the Americans had cut down the trees and brush for 200 yards on each side of the road.

Within 10 minutes after the enemy began slamming rocket grenades at the 40 tanks and armored personnel carriers leading the convoy, American artillery, bombers and helicopter gunships were in action.

The tanks and personnel carriers returned the enemy fire with cannon and .50-caliber machine guns, while the bombers and gunships raked the enemy's escape routes to the rear.

Arabs start pressure campaign

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (AP) — The Arab countries appear to be mounting a campaign to pressure Israel into accepting the Big Four powers as architects of peace in the Middle East.

The pattern emerged in statement on Thursday by Egyptian President Gamal Abdel Nasser in Cairo and by Jordan at the urgent session of the U.N. Security Council in New York. The Jordan position got strong support from the Soviet Union.

Ambassador Muhammad H. El-Farra of Jordan charged in the council that the Israeli raid on a village near Salt on Wednesday was undertaken with the aim of torpedoing the peace efforts of the United States, the Soviet Union, Britain and France.

Israeli Ambassador Yosef Tekoah denied the charge and said the raid was aimed at a base of Al Fatah, the Arab guerrilla organization which proclaims as its aim the destruction of Israel.

Tekoah asserted that if the Arab governments failed to stop activities of guerrilla fighters based on their territories Israel would "itself take all the necessary measures to put an end to it."

In a speech in Cairo, Nasser declared that the Middle East crisis was approaching the explosive stage, and that it was up to the Big Four powers to act to prevent a blowup.

He spoke as the chief U.N. delegates of the United States, the Soviet Union, Britain and France—all permanent members of the council—prepared to meet to discuss how to achieve a durable Middle East peace.

Nasser said he was resisting pressure to launch reprisal strikes against Israeli civilian targets, but added: "The day will come when the bombing and shelling of Egyptian civilians will be answered by the bombing and shelling of civilians."

He expressed dissatisfaction with U.S. proposals for the Middle East, saying there was really no change in policy toward Israel under President Nixon.

Israel has declared repeatedly that it will not accept a peace settlement imposed by the Big Four, and that it is up to the Arabs and Israel to achieve peace through negotiations.

The United States has taken cognizance of the Israeli position, and in informal bilateral talks with the other three powers has stressed a voluntary and not an imposed settlement.

Soviet Deputy Foreign Minister Jacob Malik supported Jordan's charges in the Council. In addition to castigating Israel in general, Malik said it was obvious that the Israeli government sought to subvert Big Four peace efforts.

HELOISE'S HINTS

Baskets have many uses

By HELOISE CRUSE
 DEAR FOLKS: Not long ago I asked you for suggestions on uses for little plastic berry baskets.
 My goodness, was I ever swamped with the replies. With all the marvelous ideas, it surely was difficult to decide on which ones to print.
 Here are a few that I thought were especially clever ideas:
 A hanging flower basket or ornamental bird cage can be made by wiring two, four or six baskets together (open sides facing). These may be wired in umpteen thousand shapes. Place either flowers or a little fake bird on a perch inside the "basket" or "cage." Twine flowers or vines on the outside.
 A little butterfly added to the side of the flower basket would give it that added something.
 If using the white baskets, how about a red bird inside and twining green ivy around?
 Also for those of you that are bothered with birds eating the seeds you just planted... cover the seeds with the baskets. Also keeps the snails away.

 To entertain children in a hospital... you could make a toy zoo.
 Place toy animals on a long piece of cardboard, then turn baskets upside down over each animal and glue in place.
 Isn't that a cutie? What child wouldn't love that?
 And with the Easter Sunday just around the corner you can make the cutest little Easter baskets for the wee ones.
 Weave colored ribbon around the basket and tie with a bow. The handle can be made from pipe cleaners twisted at each corner and crisscrossed. With a bit of grass in the bottom, your little one is ready for Peter Cottontail or the Easter egg hunt.
 And mothers, did you know that you can make tote purses or doll furniture for your little girls out of these baskets?
 Great in the bottom of lunch sacks, for centerpieces, shadow boxes, and containers for fruit or cookie gifts.
 Wowie, I could just go on and on... about all the ideas that you darling people have suggested.

 A basket of thanks. Heloise.
 DEAR HELOISE: The other day I reached in my closet for an item of clothing and couldn't find it anywhere. Where do you think it was?
 My teenage daughter had it on. My, did I feel old!
 Where does the time go? A Reader.
 I don't know honey, but it sure does fly.
 Seems like the "little" ones become "big" ones overnight. Heloise.
 DEAR HELOISE: Hate to throw away those old square dance skirts?
 Why not make your own square dance tablecloth and bring back those old memories.
 I cut the waistband off a lovely full skirt, tapered and stitched the opening so the skirt lay flat. Then opened up the band and pieced it to fill in the opening. Mrs. A. Tadakovich.

Michigan clubs aid Libraries for youth

Special to The Press
 DETROIT — Projects that club women in three Michigan communities did to provide improved library services for their young people have won prizes for their clubs.
 Cash awards totaling $1,000 were presented in Detroit Wednesday to three of Michigan's Federated Women's Clubs for the excellence of their programs to aid the education of young people.
 The awards, made at the annual state convention of the Michigan State Federation of Women's Clubs at the Statler Hilton, were presented by a representative of Shell Oil Company, co-sponsor of the program along with the General Federation of Women's Clubs.
 The Madison Heights Junior Women's Clubs won first place and $500, while second and third place awards of $300 and $200, respectively, were presented to the Byron Art Club and the White Lake Women's Club of Whitehall.
 "A good education is the prime building block in the growth of our great nation," said Mrs. Walter Varney Magee, president of the General Federation of Women's Clubs. "As a clubwoman, each member of the General Federation has the opportunity to become involved in her own community — where the final responsibility lies — in efforts to solve educational problems."
 The Madison Heights club

won its award for its broad support of public library services and for many other educational and cultural programs.
 Club members donated $300, representing half of the proceeds from the annual book sale, to the public library for the purchase of supplies and equipment. They also arranged educational displays at the library, provided $300 for 10 framed paintings for the library's art rental service, and added $200 to the club-sponsored in-service scholarship fund for library work.
 The club also made grants to enable art students to continue their studies and contributed to a local nursing scholarship. All 29 members were active in these and other educational projects.
 Byron Art Club won its award for establishing a functional library unit in the local elementary school.
 A library had been planned for the school but no progress had been made. The club volunteered its services in setting up a library in a room in a newly-built addition to the school. Members worked 1,800 hours sorting and repairing books, handling filing, cataloging and typing, and staffing the library following the opening in the fall of 1968. The club members also prepared charts used in a perception development program at the school. A file of these charts was later added to the library's resources.

 White Lake Women's Club won its award for conducting a book drive to help area schools meet standards for full accreditation.
 In learning that inadequate school libraries were among the reasons high schools in the area were not fully accredited, the club launched a "Share Your Books" drive to improve library facilities.
 The campaign urged residents to share books from their home libraries with the two high school libraries in the area. A list of needed books was prepared by school librarians and sent to local organizations and area newspapers.
 As a result of the club's project, which also included a benefit card party, the school libraries received 300 books and more than $400 for the purchase of visual aids, tape recordings and other materials.
 The General Federation of Women's Clubs-School program is now in its seventh year and offers 150 state and three national awards totaling $55,000. The first place winners in each state will be judged again for $2,500, $1,500 and $1,000 national awards to be presented at Cleveland, Ohio, in June. The cash awards are used by the clubs to further their aid-to-education projects.

Moose unit Plans three Activities

Three future activities were discussed when the Women of the Moose met at the Moose lodge Wednesday night.
 In the meeting conducted by Mrs. William Griffith, senior regent, with 19 members present, plans for a mother-daughter banquet on May 21 were launched.
 A former grand council member from Grand Rapids will be a guest at the April 23 meeting.
 The chapter has been invited to attend a "green bean" day ceremony at the Dearborn chapter in honor of their junior graduate regent.
 Mrs. Roy Broughton, academy of friendship chairman, is a heart patient recuperating at Beyer Memorial Hospital.

It's mainly About people

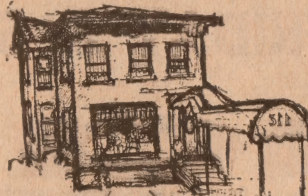

Miss Carolyn Bailey of Saline, was the honored guest at an "Around the Clock" shower given by Mrs. Judy Duncan at her home in Ann Arbor on Sunday. Appointments were carried out in pink and white, the bridal theme.
 Highlights of the afternoon were a bridal veil creation contest and an Easter egg hunt.
 Prizes at games were won by the Mesdames Virginia Gregg and Jeanne Ostrowski, of Ypsilanti, Mrs. Pam Jepsen, Mrs. Susan May, Mrs. Mary Ballenberger, and the Misses Jane Bailey and Kathy Feldkamp. Gifts for the bride-elect were appropriate for use at different times of day.
 As refreshments were served Mrs. Emily Harsh presided at the coffee and tea service while Mrs. Susan May served dessert to the 15 guests.
 On April 19, Miss Bailey will become the bride of James Feldkamp of Bridgewater.

Palm Leaf Tea

To feature Heritage talk

A talk on "The Negro's Heritage" and musical soloists will provide program features for the Palm Leaf Tea which is slated for Sunday.

The Palm Leaf Club has announced final plans for its annual tea which will be from 3 to 6 p.m. on Sunday at the L. C. Perry School at 633 Harriet St. Attendance is expected to be about 75 persons. Dr. Singer A. Buchanan, associate professor of speech at Eastern Michigan University will be the speaker, with his subject being "Come and hear all about the Negro's heritage."

Mr. John Cannon will present instrumental music selections and Miss Stephanie Smith will render a vocal solo.

The event is a benefit for a scholarship awarded each year to an Ypsilanti boy or girl.

The chairman this year is Mrs. Herbert Francois.

All members of the Association of Women's Clubs have been invited to the tea, and representatives of the associations various clubs will be pouring at the tea table.

The Palm Leaf Club is one of the city's oldest women's organizations, having been founded 65 years ago.

MRS. PHILLIP LONG
(The former Miss Mary Jane Beadle)

Newlyweds take Canadian trip

A Canadian wedding trip followed the Saturday wedding of Miss Melinda S. Hill and D. Phillip Long.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. LaMar J. Hill of 2035 Harding Ave. and the bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Harold R. Long of 1311 Jeffery St.

The wedding took place in the First Methodist Church with the Rev. Kenneth Callis officiating at 6 p.m.

The bride wore a floor length gown of Chantilly lace over organza with a scoop neckline and Empire waistline gathered fully in the back and accented with a large bow. A crown of seed pearls held her bouffant shoulder-length veil and white and yellow roses formed her bouquet atop a white Bible, a baptismal gift from her maternal grandmother.

The bride's sister, Mrs. Timothy (Cindy) Burch of Sylvania, Ohio, was matron of honor and Miss Carole Ann Long, the bridegroom's sister, was bridesmaid. They wore identical gowns of yellow nylon dotted Swiss and carried daisies and daffodils tied with yellow streamers. Their headpieces were circular crowns of daisies designed by the bride.

The flower girl was the bridegroom's sister, Gigi, who wore a long lavender nylon dotted Swiss gown identical to the bridesmaids gowns. She wore a cluster of daisies in her hair and carried a basket of daisies and yellow rose petals.

Don C. Vogelsberg was best man and Gary G. Smith, Mr. Burch, and the bride's brother, Rod L. Hill, were ushers. Soloist for the wedding was Miss Linda G. Schneider, who sang The Wedding Prayer, One Hand, One Heart, and The Lord's Prayer.

A buffet dinner and reception at the UAW Hall Local 848 at 454 Chidester followed the wedding.

The couple, who spent a weekend in Canada, are residing at 1092 Louise Ave. For travel, the bride wore a navy blue suit with white blouse and navy accessories.

A rehearsal dinner given by the bridegroom's parents took place at the Huron Motor Inn on Friday evening.

Both the newlyweds are Ypsilanti High School graduates, the bride in 1968 and the bridegroom, 1967. She attended Eastern Michigan University and is employed at Dr. Robert R. Willoughby's office. The bridegroom attended Michigan State University and is now studying management at EMU. He is employed at the A & P store at Gault Village.

MRS. PEGGY GUGGENHEIM

Future told for her art works

NEW YORK — Mrs. Peggy Guggenheim, whose art collection is worth millions, has reportedly decided that her art treasures will become part of the Solomon R. Guggenheim Museum in New York.

The 263 pieces of art owned by Mrs. Guggenheim form one of the outstanding collections of modern art in the world.

News of her decision came as trucks were moving her 125 art works that had been exhibited at the museum from Jan. 15 until this Sunday.

The collection, housed at her home in the Palazzo Venier dei Leoni on the Grand Canal in Venice, includes works by Pablo Picasso, Georges Braque, Fernand Leger, Vasily Kandinsky, Max Ernst, Jackson Pollock, Paul Klee, Piet Mondrian and others of the 20th century.

A number of museums and universities in the U.S. and abroad have been actively trying to secure the collection, with its value set as high as $12 million.

Under the arrangements, the collection and the palazzo in Venice will be entrusted to the Solomon R. Guggenheim Foundation, which owns and operates the museum. On her death the Peggy Guggenheim Foundation, Inc., will be dissolved.

The collection will not be dispersed, but remain intact in the palazzo, with the Guggenheim museum allowed to exhibit works except during the tourist season in Venice. It is one of Venice's leading sightseeing attractions.

Army lectures must omit God

New limitation on chaplains irks some Congressmen

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Army has ordered chaplains to eliminate all reference to God and religious philosophy in lectures aimed at instilling moral responsibility in soldiers.

An Army spokesman confirmed the new policy Thursday after word of it had reached some members of Congress, angering many of them.

The new policy was prompted by a complaint last year from the American Civil Liberties Union that the lectures—intended to instill a sense of moral responsibility in soldiers—were being used as religious indoctrination.

The ACLU now is asking the Air Force and Navy to take similar steps.

The ACLU objected to numerous passages in character-guidance training manuals, including one that told members of the Women's Army Corps they should do their jobs well "not for reward... but simply because it is obviously the will of God."

The forward to character guidance manuals, in use by the Army for many years, states the program is based on the philosophy of American freedom which "regards man as a creature of God."

"As such, every soldier is responsible and accountable to his Creator for the way he performs his civic and military duty, for the maintaining of his own and his nation's honor, and for the quality of service he renders to his country as a soldier," the manual states.

"I cannot remotely understand what anyone finds offensive in this concept," said Rep. William G. Bray, R-Ind. "The term Creator means many things to many people, and all but a very tiny majority, no matter what their faith, do acknowledge a 'Creator' in some form."

Bray said he has asked the Army to explain the reasoning behind its decision.

An Army spokesman said the basic objectives of the program remain unchanged. He said the main consideration in ordering the change was a soldier's constitutional rights of freedom of religion.

"It was not believed proper to have soldiers attending mandatory classes with religious overtones," he said. "Soldiers, as always, are fully encouraged to attend religious services of their respective faiths."

The Army explained that while the character guidance courses are usually prepared and given by chaplains, the program is directed by the Army's personnel division.

Four hours of the subject are required during basic training and one hour is given each month to all soldiers.

Troops, politics:

Nixon readiness For dual talks May boost peace

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Nixon administration's declared readiness to negotiate simultaneously on military and political settlements in Vietnam may result in speeding up agreement on secret peace talks in Paris.

Officials familiar with the North Vietnamese and Viet Cong approach to the negotiations say they place higher priority on the political future of South Vietnam than agreement on a mutual withdrawal of their own troops and those of the U.S. and its allies.

While the Nixon administration's emphasis recently has been on the need for negotiation of troop withdrawal, Secretary of State William P. Rogers told a Senate Foreign Relations Committee Thursday:

"I think it is in the interest of everyone to work out a settlement of both a military nature and a political nature, and I would hope these could be discussed at the same time—either in parallel bilateral talks or in some other fashion."

Rogers thus envisioned the possibility of two sets of discussions going on side by side:— Between the United States and North Vietnam. These would be concerned primarily with working out an agreement for reduction and ultimate removal of all foreign troops from the South. —Between the Vietcong-National Liberation Front and Saigon. These would deal with the political future of the country.

Rogers made it clear, however, the United States would accept some different arrangement for secret negotiations if the Communists prefer.

He carefully avoided telling the senators whether secret negotiations have in fact started, or are about to. He argued the administration's no-information policy must cover not only what goes on in private discussions in Paris but also whether private meetings are even being held.

According to the best information available from other sources, the situation is this: U.S. and North Vietnamese negotiators in Paris have been exploring quietly the problem of starting secret negotiations on substantive issues of peace and have made some progress toward an understanding.

Nixon administration officials also have been in contact with the Soviet government on this project and believe Russian influence is being used to get the negotiations started.

The details of what is happening remain a mystery, one that is particularly puzzling because, in part, administration leaders talk so much about it.

A ranking State Department official told newsmen Wednesday that in the past private discussions with the North Vietnamese negotiators had been essential to some of the negotiations.

The official, who cannot be identified under the rules of the meeting, said the enemy had stated they would break off the discussions if secrecy were violated.

Currently, reports that secret talks were actually under way have been cropping up for weeks, both here and in Paris.

Rogers himself implied that the private negotiations which the President and he have been seeking have not yet begun. He told the Senate committee that "It is our fervent hope that the other side will soon put polemics aside and begin in good faith to negotiate an end to this tragic war."

TV soap opera:

Actress disliked For drama deeds

By CYNTHIA LOWRY
NEW YORK (AP) — Several million housewives think Andrea Whiting is the wickedest woman in televisionland. Joan Copeland just feels sorry for her.

Miss Copeland knows Andrea better than anyone else! She has been playing the part for about a year in "Search for Tomorrow," one of CBS' most popular afternoon soap operas.

"Andrea tried to kill her estranged husband for months and he's still alive," the actress said with a smile. "I guess you might call her a failure."

Andrea first tried to run him down with her car—and hit the wrong person. Then she got a gun but her son found it before she could use it. Finally she stole poor Sam's medicine and turned it into a lethal potion. But somehow she, not Sam, took it by mistake and she now is emerging from a brush with death—after all, no serial writer is going to kill off a popular figure.

Evil Andrea, however, has caused some repercussions in the off-camera life of Miss Copeland, who is happily married to an engineer and has a 17-year-old son. On a recent day she stopped at a drugstore counter for a quick sandwich. On the next stool was a substantial suburban lady shopper who looked her over very carefully.

Then the shopper leaned over and hissed a nasty word.

Miss Copeland is getting accustomed to being glared at in buses and sniffed at by female passengers in subways. She knows that the show's producers withhold most of the hate mail Andrea receives, but Joan did receive a letter signed "The Viewers."

"You'd better stop this," she was told. "We are writing your husband Sam and his friends so that they know what you are doing."

She receives a lot of earnest mail pleading with her to give Sam a divorce and to reform.

Andrea is not only a frustrated murderess but she is a solitary drinker and the only member of the cast allowed to smoke cigarettes.

But Miss Copeland, veteran of five Broadway shows and an early member of the Actors' Studio, insists that Andrea is just misguided.

"If an actress tried to play her as evil for evil's sake, it would just be melodrama," she explained. "I want her to be believable, and I'm convinced that she is just trying to save herself and doesn't think about hurting others."

Miss Copeland was a pianist who stumbled into acting. A choral group with a radio hour became bored and decided to do some plays instead. She asked a playwright brother for some material. He sent it, they played it and her next stop was the American Academy of Dramatic Arts in New York.

The playwright brother? His name is Arthur Miller who among other accomplishments wrote "Death of a Salesman."

Copeland is a stage name.

U-M sets New work Program

Electronic and mixed media compositions will mingle with more traditional ensemble pieces in a program of new works by young composers to be presented by the University of Michigan School of Music on Monday.

The last of four Composers Forum concerts presented this year, the program will include "Kabop!" by David Robbins, Robert Boury's Sonata for Two Cellos, Suite for Three Flutes by Joan Harkness, "Ore" by Richard Manderville, Gerald Plain's "Golden Wedding," Two Movements for String Quartet by Peter Klausmeyer and "The Great Whereafter" by Peter Griffith.

Although the Composers Forum has been a motive force at the university for some 20 years, it is only within the last year that the composition department has established a group of young artists committed to the presentation of contemporary works. It is the aim of the project to provide these artists a professional performance experience.

Another function of the program is to enlarge the range of musical events available to the community. In accordance with this goal, Monday's 8:30 p.m. concert in the School of Music Recital Hall will be open to the public free of charge.

Prosecution denied Use of RFK film

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The state begins its rebuttal in the murder trial of Sirhan Bishara Sirhan today without the opportunity to show a movie film of Robert F. Kennedy in the moments before he was mortally wounded.

After the defense rested its month-long case Thursday, Judge Herbert V. Walker ruled the film would be inflammatory—thus denying the state a vivid way of evoking the memory of Kennedy.

The color film showed Kennedy addressing supporters in the Ambassador Hotel after he won California's Democratic presidential primary last June 4 and ended with him, arms outstretched in victory, saying, "On to Chicago!" He left the stage, walked a few steps into an anteroom, and was shot by Sirhan.

"Here is a young man who just made what he considered a major victory, very happy, very gay, congratulating everybody," the judge said. "The contrast between that and what happened in this court certainly would be conveyed to the jury."

Co-prosecutors John E. Howard and David N. Fitts said they wanted to run the 12-minute movie to show that Kennedy that night said nothing about Israel. Sirhan claims the New York senator's pro-Israel stance turned his love for Kennedy to hate.

"I recall no evidence that this defendant heard any part or appreciable part of that speech," Judge Walker said in denying the motion.

Six psychologists and two psychiatrists testified Sirhan was mentally ill. One called him crazy, another demented.

Try and Stop Me

By BENNETT CERF

PROTESTS BURTON HILLIS, "Somebody is simply going to have to stop the shaving lotion explosion. As it is, I no longer can decide whether I want to smell like a moonshiner, a saddle, a sailor, a business executive, a sheik—or plain witch hazel!"

THIS ONE'S FOR FRIDAY...

When an old junk dealer died, his widow, to her amazement, found a $20,000 paid-up life insurance policy among his effects. "My poor Mac," she wailed. "All his life he slaved to keep us just from starving—and just when God pours a fortune into our laps, he drops dead!"

The clever kids who put on a more-or-less spontaneous show ("The Fourth Wall") at the off-Broadway, Theatre East, introduced a sketch recently that gave the audience a jolt. A young man, firm believer in computers, felt the need for some female companionship, so without further ado, arranged a date for himself on the computer system.

The girl who resulted was absolute perfection—beautiful, lissome, brilliant, and compliant, and furthermore, her tastes and characteristics matched his need all the way down the line.

Then he felt her hands. They were cold—cold as ice. Suddenly he sensed the fly in the ointment. The girl was none other than the computer itself, out for a night on the town!

DEAR ABBY:

Readers get the bite In denture debate

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: My sympathy to Grandpa, who complained because it took him so long to eat he couldn't carry on a dinner table conversation with the others.

There is nothing that will drive a man to distraction quicker than ill-fitting dentures. Sending him back to his dentist won't help. What Grandpa needs is a supply of thermoplastic material that will enable him to eat like a horse and talk as much as Hubert Humphrey at the same time. Toothless But Happy

DEAR ABBY: Clinical tests have proven that patients lose approximately 75 per cent of their chewing ability when they get false teeth.

For every person who says his dentures are "like his own teeth" there are 100 who wish they had their own teeth back.

Dentists do not like to see their patients lose their natural teeth, but there is usually no choice. Patients, after neglecting their mouths for 10, 15, and 20 years, will come to a dentist and ask him to try to "save" their teeth. This, of course, is impossible.

And while I'm on the subject, may I use your vast readership to implore people to take care of their teeth. No dentures will ever replace them. D.M., D. D. S., Beverly Hills, Calif.

DEAR ABBY: I haven't had a problem I couldn't solve myself which is quite something at age 82, but I have a word for Grandpa about his store-teeth.

Sixteen years ago, before starting on a world cruise in a small yacht, I was advised by a San Diego dentist to have all my teeth extracted because if I ran into any trouble I would be far from the dentist.

He took the impressions after X-rays and when the upper plate was ready, I came in, he yanked all my uppers and popped the plate in, telling me to leave it in for a week. I did and it worked fine. Then I came in for the bottom set and his partner said I should keep my own lowers, so I did. I still have them but have to go in to have them treated regularly.

I should have had the lowers out, too. It would have saved a lot of trouble and expense. Kona Great Grandfather

DEAR ABBY: About Grandpa who can't keep up with the rest of the folks when it comes to eating with his new China clippers: You should have told him to take his time, enjoy the meal, and kid the others about where's the fire when they talk and eat and leave him way behind. He'll live longer.

Remember, too, that it took more than two months to learn to run. How do you expect to learn to eat with new teeth in that short time? Wears Them

DEAR ABBY: Almost without exception I agree with you, but in the case of Grandpa, I feel a bit more information on your part is called for. It is obvious that you don't wear dentures, Abby.

May I suggest that all new denture wearers take smaller bites, chew more slowly and distribute the food equally on both sides of the mouth to stabilize the dentures.

If they practice between meals with raisins, it will help. These hints and lots of patience may do the trick. If that doesn't work, then your advice to "put the bite on the dentist for a better fit" is in order. Yours very truly, C. W. F. Jr., D. D. S., Shreveport, La.

DEAR ABBY: I read your advice to the denture patient, and I must say that you sure did put your foot in it.

I have practiced dentistry for more years than you are old and can tell you that NO denture patient can eat as fast with "store-bought" teeth as he could with his own.

Also, there are any number of denture wearers who, because of the anatomy of their mouths, or their inability to adjust to new situations, cannot get a better "fit" no matter how hard the dentist tries. Old Pro

DEAR "PRO": All right, I'll take 10 lashes with 40 yards of dental floss, and next time when it comes to "dentistry," I'll keep my unprofessional mouth shut.

Duckweeds 'pop' To the surface

Aquatic duckweeds, submerged all winter, pop to the surface by filling themselves with buoyant gas. In the fall, they sink again to the bottom by taking on water ballast like a submarine.

DR. BROTHERS:

Widowed mother weaving Emotional dependency

By DR. JOYCE BROTHERS

Dear Dr. Brothers: When my mother was widowed two years ago I did my best to help her through those first lonely months. I visited or telephoned her almost every day. Now I'm tired of worrying about her all the time. After all, she is only 58, is in good health, and has a comfortable income. She continues to act as if she were on her last legs and wants everything done for her, from shopping to taking care of her accounts. Her latest idea is to move in with us which would be impossible as I have enough to do looking after my own family.—K.J.

Dear Mrs. J.: The obligation to care for one's parents is not clearly defined in our culture. While most people would agree that it is a natural responsibility, there are conflicting attitudes which make us ambivalent about our own feelings.

Our society stresses the independence of the small family unit, consisting of parents and children, and there is also the belief that it is wisest for a married couple to live separately from their parents.

On the other hand, a strong sense of duty mingled with genuine affection makes the adult feel guilty about his reluctance to incorporate his aging parents into his household.

But the problem with your mother is not one of physical incapacity or economic necessity. It is more a matter of emotional dependency.

Apparently she believes she will feel more secure under the same roof with you. Dr. Clifford Kirkpatrick observes that it is sometimes the older parent who has played a childish role in marriage who is especially prone to becoming prematurely dependent upon his grown children.

It is only natural that a woman should feel desolate with the loss of her husband of many years. But eventually, for her own mental health and the sake of her family, she must begin to re-establish some kind of life of her own.

The woman who has been extremely dependent on her husband and family for her sense of purpose in life and her self-esteem may automatically turn to her adult children to replace her husband as her protector and provider.

Of course, this is not always true and sometimes the most dependent of wives become strong-willed widows. Your mother is not giving herself a chance to develop a new center to her life. She finds it easier to rely on your guidance and assistance.

Since there are no compelling reasons why your mother should take up residence with you, and you and your husband feel it would be a strain on your own family, it would be best to gently dissuade your mother from her intention. Unless there is some definite function she could fulfill in your household, considerable friction could develop from her extraneousness to the family structure.

However, your mother is probably still going to be dependent upon your emotional support. To help her break out of her lonely isolation, investigate all the facilities in your community. She might be able to find a woman of her own age in similar circumstances who would be willing to share a residence or she might be able to move to an area where she would be likely to meet older people.

It might also be wise to persuade her to seek professional counseling to help her adjust to her new situation. It is not necessary to cut her off from your concern and help but to limit the help so that you can give without resentment and not to limit your expression of love.

Encouraging your mother to spend more time with her grandchildren and finding ways in which her advice and help are genuinely needed can give your mother a greater sense of belonging and purpose.

"What We Owe Our Aging Parents," is a thoughtful discussion by Dr. Joyce Brothers. For a copy of this leaflet, send 10c and a stamped, self-addressed envelope to her in care of The Press.

TEEN DATELINE:

Pro side of sex film seen

By ELE and WALT DULANEY

Dear Ele and Walt: With the new freedom in movies, it seems that almost anything goes. My teacher said that when "Lolita" first came out, minors couldn't see it. Now it's shown on TV for everyone and no one thinks anything of it. I guess that means "Candy," "Therese and Isabelle," and "The Fox" will eventually be on TV, too. Where do you think movies will ultimately go? And should all of them be shown on TV?—English Class Survey.

Dear Survey: There's no question of where film exploration is headed. We will eventually see explicit acts of sexual intercourse on our screens.

The lead has already been taken in Scandinavia where at least one country has dropped all censorship, giving books, magazines and films free rein to show whatever they will. That means that what were formerly labeled "stag movies" are now marketed on the main boulevards.

Is this disastrous? Well, in the most liberal of Scandinavian countries, Denmark, once pornography was legalized the sales dropped off and so did the percentage sex crimes. Would the same thing happen in America? There's no assurance it would but we'd guess yes.

Should such films end up on the home TV screen? We'd cringe but if it comes we'd hope at least they'll be booked for after 10 p.m. showing. It's too disconcerting to think of a five-year-old looking up from his coloring book and asking the family for an explanation of just what that assorted crew of weird men were doing to "Candy." That's not our idea of a good beginning to sex education. Is it yours?—Ele and Walt.

Dear Ele: Is there any way to make a girl look shorter and her boyfriend look taller? If so, please tell me. I am a girl 13 years old and my boyfriend is 12 but he is about a head shorter than I.—Too Tall.

Dear Tall: Don't slump! Slumping is as good as carrying a placard saying: "I'm a head taller than Dave and we're embarrassed about it." Instead, be sure both of you make full use of the height nature gave you. But naturally you'll wear flats instead of heels when you've dates with him.

When you're walking hand-in-hand, there's no way for you to minimize the height difference. Just return the stares of curious strangers with friendly smiles. If friends tease, tell them,

"We've decided no tape measure was going to keep us apart."—Ele.

Dear Ele and Walt: I invited a boy from another school to my school dance but it was too late and he already has other plans for the night. I was very embarrassed about the whole thing. That was three months ago.

Now there's another dance coming up and I really would like to make another try for him. The dance is five weeks off, but do you think it would seem like I was hard-up if I asked him a second after he refused the first for good reason?—Camille.

Dear Camille: Make your move but don't mention the previous invitation. A girl can ask two times without seeming anxious. But in my opinion, a third try is pushing it.

If a boy has had two indications of her interest and he doesn't make some "let's get together" pitch for a date himself, then he's not really interested in her company on that basis.—Ele and Walt.

YOUR HEALTH:

Excessive fear of cancer Is an illness in itself

DR. LESTER COLEMAN

The universal fear of cancer is understandable. Having been bombarded by the terrifying statistics of cancer, many more people now suffer from the severe illness of fear itself. Mingled with the anxiety about cancer is a fear of the unknown and an exaggerated fear that no one can escape this hazard to the body and to the emotions.

Certainly it is true that cancer can be a devastating disease. Yet it is also true that when cancer is recognized early and treated intensively the cures are often spectacular and long-lasting. But to impress on people the need for constant examination and observation of one's body serves only to magnify their expressed and unexpressed fears. How much more encouraging it would be to induce people to have regular medical examinations for their general health rather than for "cancer checks."

Physicians and dentists too often create a trap of fear because of some strange, traditional attitudes about cancer in relation to their patients. I have found, in many years of practice, that patients have come running to me in a panic because of an inadvertent thought implanted in their tender psyche. A casual statement, "you better watch that because it may be pre-cancerous," may leave permanent, disastrous aftereffects in a sensitive, fearful mind.

It is my contention and conviction that if anything is to be watched, it should be watched by the physician at regular intervals and not by the patient. I have known people who have spent their productive lives revolving around such an implanted fear of cancer; a fear that luxuriates in the fertile soil of these man-made anxieties. Waiting and watching for a "cancer" is a malignant disease itself.

Actually I do not know what pre-cancer is. My liver, which is now in perfectly good health, could be considered to be pre-cancerous at some future date. I do not think it fair to myself to spend the rest of my life anticipating that my health will be destroyed by something that does not exist. Certainly I advise that everyone with the slightest suspicion of any illness be under the supervision of a doctor. I repeat that the patient must not be terrified into being his own "cancer observer."

Speaking of your health: What fire hazards are there in your house?

Probe of airline service Between peninsulas asked

LANSING (AP) — A legislative investigation of North Central Airlines' operations in Michigan was called for Thursday by Sen. Joseph S. Mack, D-Ironwood.

Mack accused the airline, the only line serving the Upper Peninsula, of charging inequitable rates and discouraging passengers by failing to confirm reservations.

"They deliberately keep from having full planes so no competitive airline can get in, Mack charged.

"I would like to see United or any other airline be given the opportunity to fly through there (the Upper Peninsula)," Mack said.

"The increasing volume of traffic indicates a need for additional service, either through more flights or the certification of other carriers," Mack said in his resolution calling for establishment of a five-member investigative committee.

Mack said he frequently has been unable to get confirmation on flights from Ironwood to Lansing. But when he boards the plane, he said, there are 20 to 25 empty seats.

"This hasn't happened once or twice," he said.

Mack also asked for direct service between the Upper and Lower Peninsulas.

"I can fly from Detroit to California and back faster than I can fly from Ironwood to Lansing, Mack said, he must fly to Rhinelander, Wausau and Stevens Point,

In elementary schools:

Sex education irks parents

DETROIT (AP) — Sex education for students in suburban elementary schools on Detroit's northwest side has enraged some parents.

This week in Livonia, about 100 protesting parents stormed a school board meeting. One irate father said:

"I cannot believe that a child who still believes in Santa Claus, the Easter Bunny and the good fairy needs to have the sex act described."

In most cases, lower elementary school children are taught about animal families and human families in the context of family members' responsibilities to each other.

In some cases, the courses are referred to as "growth and development" rather than as "sex education."

"Telling some parents that you're teaching their babies about sex is like waving a red flag in front of a bull," said one educator.

The suburbs of Oak Park and Plymouth have ad kindergarten through sixth grade sex education programs for four and three years, respectively.

Wis., where he must wait 90 minutes before continuing on to Green Bay, Wis.

At Green Bay, he has an hour wait before flying to Grand Rapids where he must change planes in order to land at Lansing, he said.

The flight takes up to seven hours, he said. He estimated the distance between Ironwood and Lansing at 570 miles.

In addition, he said the airline charges him for stopping at all the points en route. He compared charges to the Lansing-Chicago route flown by both North Central and United Air Lines.

United flies direct to Chicago for about $17, he said. A North Central flight with stopovers at Grand Rapids, Muskegon, Milwaukee, Wis., costs the same.

He is not charged extra for the Milwaukee stop, he said, because of the competition.

John Rose, North Central station agent at Lansing, said the reservation problems arise because people reserve a seat and never show up.

As for ticket costs, Rose said, the Civil Aeronautics Board sets the fares.

Las Vegas casinos aim At older folks' crowd

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — The miniskirts and new cars would tell you it was 1969. But in Las Vegas showrooms this week the music had the sound of the 1940s. The casinos were aiming frankly for the older crowd.

From Guy Lombardo at the south end of the Strip to Fred Waring downtown, nostalgia— seeking tourists turned back the clock to hear "All of Me," "A Cottage for Sale," and "It's a Lonesome Old Town."

Russ Morgan, Sarah Vaughan, Duke Ellington, Harry James, Louis Prima, Ray Anthony and Sy Zentner are some of the others headlining the marquees.

And hotels were booking such names as Lionel Hampton, Woody Herman, Orrin Tucker and Freddy Martin.

"A younger entertainer might draw a larger audience," said Tropicana executive Harvey Diederich. "But I think Lombardo brings in an audience with more money."

The young crowd doesn't spend as much as people think, Diederich said, and their parents are likely to gamble more. The Tropicana also has "young acts," as do the others.

"IKE'S" TOUR OF DUTY

Career soldier Eisenhower Always a solid American

There was a simple plainsman's eloquence about Eisenhower that touched Americans. He had no flair as an orator, little sophisticated wit, and no flamboyance.

But "I Like Ike," was a national sentiment—so much so that the Democratic and Republican parties both sought to make him president, even while his political persuasion was unknown.

He was the only Republican president in a generation. And his party controlled the House of Representatives for only two of his eight years in office, yet he rolled up majorities matched previously only by Franklin D. Roosevelt in his first two terms. He was a career soldier who called war "this damnable thing," who said he hoped to see "people in my profession permanently put out of a job."

It was characteristic of Ike that in his speech to the 1968 Republican National Convention—pipet to the delegates from his hospital room—he subordinated politics to a plea for "traveling the pathways of peace, with honor and justice."

Peace and Honor. The words surfaced again and again in a brilliant career that was a succession of peaks with few valleys; general of the Army, allied commander in chief for North Africa, commanding general of Allied powers in the European theater, chief of staff of the Army, president of Columbia University, two terms as President of the United States.

Always he spoke of the strength of America. "Let us first remind ourselves of the greatness of this nation and its people," he told the Republican convention. "Let's not waste time this year searching out someone to blame, even though some seem more disposed to concede rather than to stand firmly for America."

Less than 12 hours after he spoke, Eisenhower was stricken with his third heart attack of the year—the sixth one since 1955. He was unable to watch the convention on television, but was told that Richard M. Nixon, his vice president, had been chosen as the Republicans' 1968 standard bearer.

"I am delighted," were the words relayed from the hospital room. "You know I am an honorary delegate and could I have been there and voted, then the total number of votes for Nixon would have been 693 instead of 692."

He had endorsed Nixon shortly before the convention started, the first time Eisenhower had used his prestige publicly to attempt to influence the party's choice of a nominee.

Nixon responded in his acceptance speech by declaring: "Let's win this one for Ike." A few days later Eisenhower suffered his seventh heart attack.

The 34th President of the United States was the third of the seven sons of David and Ida Stover Eisenhower. One of Ike's brothers, Paul, died in infancy; the others were successes in their own right: Arthur, a banker; Edgar, a lawyer; Earl, an electrical engineer; Milton, a government official and college president; and Roy, a druggist.

His grandfather traveled west with the wagon trains in 1878 and settled near Abilene, Kan. Their father failed with his general store and moved his family to Denison, Tex., where Dwight was born Oct. 14, 1890. A year later the family returned to Abilene and the father took a job in a creamery.

Young Eisenhower graduated 61st in a class of 164 from West Point in 1915. As a lieutenant at Ft. Sam Houston, Tex., he met Denver girl Mamie Geneva Doud at a party. They were married July 1, 1916. A son, Dwight Doud, born a year later, died of scarlet fever at 3. A second son, John Sheldon Doud, followed his father to West Point.

In the 1930s, then Maj. Eisenhower accompanied Gen. Douglas MacArthur to the Philippines. Early in World War II, he came to the attention of Gen. George C. Marshall, the Army chief of staff, who summoned Eisenhower to Washington. Ike was sent to London to make recommendations about the organization and development of American forces in Europe. To his surprise, he was named to the European Theater command with orders to execute his own plans.

Eisenhower first headed the expeditionary force to North Africa in 1942 and early the next year was made commander in chief of all Allied forces in the North African campaign.

In 1943, Eisenhower was named Allied commander for the invasion of Europe. D-Day came on June 6, 1944. He directed the Allied forces to victory over Germany and presided over surrender ceremonies. Soon after, he returned to Washington to become Army chief of staff, holding the post until 1948 when he became president of Columbia University.

But President Harry S. Truman summoned him to Washington to serve temporarily as chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff. Later he took a longer leave of absence to organize and command North Atlantic Treaty Organization forces.

The affection the nation felt for Ike paid off in the 1952 election. He had a plurality of more than 6.5 million votes over Democrat Adlai Stevenson, carrying 39 of the 48 states.

The Korean War was ended by an armistice in Eisenhower's first term after a dramatic visit to South Korea before his inauguration.

It was in the Eisenhower years that both the United States and Russia developed hydrogen bombs, engaging in a grim race for superiority. It was also the time when the Space Age dawned with unmanned satellites.

In 1954 the Supreme Court declared the segregation of schools to be unconstitutional. Three years later, Eisenhower became the first president since Reconstruction to use federal troops to enforce a court order—the integration of schools in Little Rock, Ark.

The United States, under Eisenhower, severed relations with Cuba after Fidel Castro's revolution, but it did not support the Hungarian uprising.

Eisenhower sent Marines to Lebanon at that country's request after a coup in neighboring Iraq.

In the twilight of his second term, the United States and Russia appeared to be moving closer than at any time since World War II toward the détente that Eisenhower so long had sought.

Then, May 1, 1960, disaster struck. A U-2 spy plane piloted by Francis Gary Powers was shot down over Soviet Russia.

An angered Khrushchev scuttled the Paris summit before it got started and the uproar that ensued cast a shadow that lingered for months.

By United Press International
Dwight David Eisenhower won impressive victories in war and politics. But his greatest conquest was the affection of the American people.

Just about everyone liked Ike—even Democrats who voted against him in his two successful campaigns for the White House. He enjoyed a wider personal popularity, and had fewer real enemies, than any U.S. President since George Washington.

Eisenhower became a national hero as a military commander. But his overriding concern as president was to win a stable peace for a world living in the shadow of the hydrogen bomb. He considered the ending of the Korean conflict the most important accomplishment of his first term. And his principal preoccupation from the start of his second term was to restore peace and stability to the Middle East.

Eisenhower was past his 50th birthday before he was caught up in the fast-moving stream of history which took him to the highest military and civilian posts his country could confer.

He spent the first half-century of his life in relative obscurity, growing up in a farm home at Abilene, Kan., attending West Point, and serving in routine assignments as a career Army officer.

World War II brought him to national and world attention. Promoted rapidly through a series of important combat commands, he became a five-star general and supreme commander of the Allied forces that smashed Hitler's "Fortress Europe."

After the war came a seven-year interlude during which he served as Army Chief of Staff, president of Columbia University, and commander of North Atlantic Treaty Organization forces.

His political career began at the top in 1952, when he yielded to a persistent demand from his admirers to seek the Republican presidential nomination.

He won the nomination in a rough convention battle with Sen. Robert A. Taft of Ohio and went on to defeat Gov. Adlai E. Stevenson of Ill. in the Democratic presidential election, by an overwhelming majority in the November election.

On Jan. 20, 1953, at the age of 62, Eisenhower was inaugurated as 33rd President of the United States. He was the first Republican to occupy the White House in 20 years.

His popularity with the voters grew steadily during his first term. The end of the Korean bloodshed, the death of Russian dictator Josef Stalin and the emergence of a new regime in Moscow, the Big Four "Summit" conference in Geneva in the summer of 1955, all contributed to the easing of public fears of a nuclear holocaust.

A heart attack which he suffered during his third year in office raised doubts about his ability to run for a second term. But he recovered from that attack, and from a subsequent abdominal operation, and was renominated unanimously by the Republican convention in San Francisco in August, 1956. The Democrats again chose Stevenson to oppose him.

Campaigning on a "peace and prosperity" platform, Eisenhower won reelection by a landslide polling the largest popular vote ever before received by a presidential candidate. But Democrats won control of both chambers of Congress.

To election results convinced Eisenhower that the Republican party must be "modernized" and cast in a more liberal and internationalist mold if it was to win political power in the future. He began his second term by pushing the party in that direction with a federal budget that called for a substantial increase in spending to support a variety of social welfare and international programs. This budget promptly came under heavy fire from the conservative wing of the party, as well as from Democrats. Business organizations which had supported him during his first term opened a sharp attack on his request for federal aid to schools and other measures of "modern Republicanism."

Eisenhower deeply resented the charge, by some of his critics, that he had "swung to the left" and abandoned his first-term goals of government economy and retrenchment of federal power. He felt that he was acting in complete consistency with the political creed he expressed at the start of his presidency: "We will be liberal in programs that affect the lives and welfare of people, and conservative in the handling of their money."

Dwight David Eisenhower was born Oct. 14, 1890, at Denison, Tex. When he was a few months old, his family moved to Abilene, Kan., where he and his five brothers grew up in a home where money was often scarce.

He became a professional soldier almost accidentally. He applied for entrance to the Naval Academy in 1911, but was rejected because he was a few months over the age limit. So he took the West Point examination instead.

He graduated as a second lieutenant in 1915, along with a large number of other future generals who won the Class of 1915 the nickname of "the class the stars fell on."

Lt. Eisenhower showed his first flash of tactical genius at his first post-Ft. Sam Houston, Tex. He met Mamie Geneva Doud at a post dance in October and asked for a date. The popular girl told him to call back in a month. Instead he went into action with a barrage of telephone calls spaced 15 minutes apart. He got a date for the following evening. Then he moved in on the Doud family's Sunday picnics. By December, he and Mamie were engaged. They were married at Denver on July 1, 1916.

When the United States entered World War I, Eisenhower thought his chance had come to win glory on the battlefield, but he spent the war as a captain, commanding a tank training school at Gettysburg, Pa. Many years later, they went back to Gettysburg to buy a 169-acre farm and fix up the only private home they ever owned.

The first real break in his military career came in 1933, when he was appointed aide to Gen. Douglas MacArthur, then Army Chief of Staff. Two years later, he followed MacArthur to the Philippines, where he helped establish the commonwealth army that fought so gallantly at Bataan.

When war clouds gathered in Europe, he was called back to the United States and in 1940 became chief of the war plans division of the U.S. general staff. He was a lieutenant colonel at the outbreak of World War II and by the time of Pearl Harbor was a brigadier general (temporary).

In March, 1942, he was appointed chief of the operations division of the general staff and was promoted to major general. He won a reputation at the Pentagon as brilliant officer and became a protégé of Chief of Staff George C. Marshall.

He still was virtually unknown outside professional Army circles when President Franklin D. Roosevelt announced his selection as supreme commander of the Allied forces for the invasion of Africa.

The choice, made at Marshall's suggestion, was based on the fact that Eisenhower had worked out the plans for the opening of a "second front" in western Europe, and it was felt that he was the best man to put the plans into operation.

He brought to his task a ruthless driving power that his subordinates recognized and respected immediately. The Germans came to know and fear him in their bloody retreat across France and the Rhine.

His tenets of command were few and to the point. Apply the maximum force against the enemy, give him no rest, strike boldly and fight as a land, sea and air team without regard for nationality or division of glory.

Later, Eisenhower became commander of American forces in Europe and military governor of the U.S. zone in Germany.

As 1945 neared an end, he returned to Washington and succeeded Marshall as Army chief of staff. During this period he was constantly confronted by ardent admirers and well-wishers who wanted to push him for political office.

On May 2, 1948, Eisenhower retired as chief of staff and a month later he became president of Columbia University in New York City.

In this civilian post, he was more than ever considered fair game for admirers who wanted to draft him as a presidential candidate. But he firmly took himself out of the 1948 election campaign by declaring in a letter to a newspaper publisher that he did not think a military man should run for president unless there were exceptional circumstances to make it necessary.

In December, 1950, he was sent to Paris to be supreme commander of the newly organized North Atlantic Treaty Organization. Displaying the talent for diplomacy that made his World War II commands a success, he managed to build an effective international fighting force for the 12 NATO nations that had banded together to resist Communist aggression.

While he was in Paris, a new "Ike for President" boom—looking toward 1952—was started. A procession of Republican senators and congressmen called at Eisenhower's Paris headquarters to urge him to run.

Then came the GOP convention in hot and steamy Chicago in July, 1952. Eisenhower defeated Sen. Robert A. Taft of Ohio for the nomination on the first ballot.

Eisenhower swung into his first campaign against Stevenson with a vigor that amazed politicians who a few months earlier had found him a most reluctant candidate. He crisscrossed the continent on speaking tours, traveling 30,000 miles by air and 20,000 by train.

He won over Stevenson in a walk, polling 33,927,252 votes to the Democratic nominee's 27,314,992. The electoral count was even more lopsided: Eisenhower 442, Stevenson 89.

One of his first acts as president-elect was to keep a campaign promise to visit the Korean battlefield. His foreign policies were based on a simple principle, which he once expressed at a news conference—that in the atomic age, "there is no longer any practical alternative to peace."

He also believed that the United States must avoid, if at all possible, any more Korea-like land wars in Asia on the periphery of Communist power. Forces threatened to sweep into control of Indochina, he resisted the urging of some U.S. military leaders to commit American forces to the fight.

The United States did not intervene and France, with tacit U.S. consent, accepted a truce which divided the Indochinese state of Vietnam into Communist and free halves.

In an effort to prevent further Red aggression in the same area, the United States took the lead in forming the Southeast Asia Treaty Organization, a mutual defense pact along the lines of Europe's NATO.

The Geneva "summit" conference of July, 1955, raised Eisenhower's global prestige to new heights. His sincerity in proclaiming America's peaceful intent impressed even the Communists, and was hailed by "nervous neutrals" around the world as dramatic refutation of Red claims that this country was run by "warmongers."

When Eisenhower entered the White House in 1953, his first domestic goals were to cut federal spending and taxes, balance and budget, check inflation and stabilize the buying power of the dollar.

He began the task of retrenchment by slashing 13 billion dollars from the federal spending proposals of his Democratic predecessor, Harry S. Truman.

He felt that his administration's fiscal policies were primarily responsible for checking an inflationary rise in the cost of living which had been going on almost steadily since the start of World War II, and for putting the U.S. economy on a solid footing for sustained growth.

Except for a relatively mild recession in 1954, the economy boomed steadily. Eisenhower had mixed emotions about life in the White House. He liked doing a job; his long training in the military had made duty to country a driving force, and the thought of idle retirement was repugnant. On the other hand, he chafed at the lack of privacy. He disliked being on public display, and he felt that many of the formalities of life in the White House were tiresome and unnecessary.

In 1957 Russia's first Sputnik added impetus to Western peace offensives and the President journeyed to Bermuda to confer with British Prime Minister Harold MacMillan on the mid-east crisis and in December attended a NATO meeting in Paris only 19 days after suffering a "mild stroke."

While he was in Paris, a new "Ike for President" boom—looking toward 1952—was started. A procession of Republican senators and congressmen called at Eisenhower's Paris headquarters to urge him to run.

Then came the GOP convention in hot and steamy Chicago in July, 1952. Eisenhower defeated Sen. Robert A. Taft of Ohio for the nomination on the first ballot.

Eisenhower swung into his first campaign against Stevenson with a vigor that amazed politicians who a few months earlier had found him a most reluctant candidate. He crisscrossed the continent on speaking tours, traveling 30,000 miles by air and 20,000 by train.

He won over Stevenson in a walk, polling 33,927,252 votes to the Democratic nominee's 27,314,992. The electoral count was even more lopsided: Eisenhower 442, Stevenson 89.

One of his first acts as president-elect was to keep a campaign promise to visit the Korean battlefield. His foreign policies were based on a simple principle, which he once expressed at a news conference—that in the atomic age, "there is no longer any practical alternative to peace."

He also believed that the United States must avoid, if at all possible, any more Korea-like land wars in Asia on the periphery of Communist power. Forces threatened to sweep into control of Indochina, he resisted the urging of some U.S. military leaders to commit American forces to the fight.

The United States did not intervene and France, with tacit U.S. consent, accepted a truce which divided the Indochinese state of Vietnam into Communist and free halves.

In an effort to prevent further Red aggression in the same area, the United States took the lead in forming the Southeast Asia Treaty Organization, a mutual defense pact along the lines of Europe's NATO.

The Geneva "summit" conference of July, 1955, raised Eisenhower's global prestige to new heights. His sincerity in proclaiming America's peaceful intent impressed even the Communists, and was hailed by "nervous neutrals" around the world as dramatic refutation of Red claims that this country was run by "warmongers."

When Eisenhower entered the White House in 1953, his first domestic goals were to cut federal spending and taxes, balance and budget, check inflation and stabilize the buying power of the dollar.

He began the task of retrenchment by slashing 13 billion dollars from the federal spending proposals of his Democratic predecessor, Harry S. Truman.

He felt that his administration's fiscal policies were primarily responsible for checking an inflationary rise in the cost of living which had been going on almost steadily since the start of World War II, and for putting the U.S. economy on a solid footing for sustained growth.

Except for a relatively mild recession in 1954, the economy boomed steadily. Eisenhower had mixed emotions about life in the White House. He liked doing a job; his long training in the military had made duty to country a driving force, and the thought of idle retirement was repugnant. On the other hand, he chafed at the lack of privacy. He disliked being on public display, and he felt that many of the formalities of life in the White House were tiresome and unnecessary.

committee agreed at an informal meeting following the assembly that the work has just begun for the committee and the parish.

Gellott and Anhut pointed out that bolstering the enrollment at the 8-year-old high school facility would be the main order of business.

St. John's has a capacity of 400 students at the Packard Rd. site.

Roosevelt High School, which is being phased out this year, has been tapped for some transfers. Outlying areas such as Plymouth have been suggested as student sources. Also Catholics now attending public schools were mentioned as possible new students.

"Open houses" at the school—possibly hosted by students—were suggested to inform parents and students about the facilities and programs available at St. John's.

Fr. King and the committeemen said that under no circumstances did they begin this project with the idea of "one more yearing it." They agreed that any stipulations were "built-in" in the phrase "financial situation" and that the school would stay in operation as long as possible.

The mechanics of a follow through on the $5 per week pledge drive for parents or students in the high school, the status of the ad hoc committee and possible recourses for filling anticipated teaching vacancies were discussed.

Gellott said many people, as well as ideas, were "on the fence" until the future of St. John's was decided.

Fr. King said there is still the possibility of getting a shared-time, or released time program with the Ypsilanti School District. In these programs students "exchange" facilities and subjects.

Fr. King stressed that parish unity is an important factor to be considered. He said there are other aspects of parish-community life, such as the grade school, catechism classes and adult education, that must be considered.

Four Americans appointed:

Dearden named cardinal

VATICAN CITY (AP) — Pope Paul VI today named 35 new cardinals of the Roman Catholic Church. They included four Americans—Archbishops Terence Cooke of New York, John Dearden of Detroit, John Wright of Pittsburgh and John Carberry of St. Louis.

This brought the total number of U.S. cardinals to 10, the largest number in history.

Thirty-three of the new princes of the Church will be elevated at a secret consistory April 28.

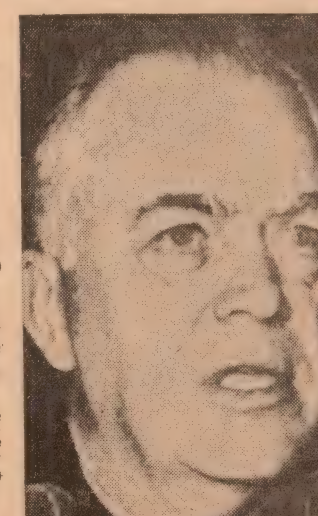

Two of them will not be present. The Pope named them "in pectore"—in his heart—and will not reveal their identity until some future time or perhaps never. This has been done in the past where the announcement of a prelate's elevation might endanger his safety, if he was in a country whose government was inimical to the Church, for example. The consistory will increase the College of Cardinals to a record membership of 134.

It will be the third consistory of Pope Paul's six-year-old reign. At his last, on June 26, 1967, he increased the college to 118 cardinals, then a record. But in the past two years 16 of these prelates have died.

The present American cardinals are Richard Cushing of Boston, Patrick O'Boyle of Washington, Lawrence Shehan of Baltimore, John Krol of Cleveland, John Cody of Chicago and James McIntyre of Los Angeles.

Pope Paul's nominees today also included Archbishop Joseph Wala of the Congo, who will become the third black African prince of the church.

Braves' Joe Frye accorded Class A mention:

Rhodin unanimous all-stater

Ypsilanti High's Bob Rhodin was the only unanimous choice on the Associated Press Class A all-state team which was announced today.

The Braves' star heads a list of 10 of the tallest and best prep cagers in the state as selected by a panel of sports writers from around the state. Rhodin's running mate, Joe Frye, was accorded honorable mention.

Among the nine others selected were Ernie Johnson, 6-8 center for Grand Rapids Ottawa Hills, Ken Brady, 6-9 center of Flint Central and Detroit Mumford's 6-9 Marvin Taylor. Completing the team are Tom Marsh of Detroit Northern, John Sark of Detroit Austin, Cal Tatum of Muskegon, Leon Roberts of Portage Northern, Doug MacKenzie of Warren Fitzgerald and Blake Ashdown of East Lansing.

Rhodin was the main cog in Ypsilanti High's second consecutive undefeated regular season, leading the team in rebounding and scoring. He always hustles and is a great defensive forward. His Coach, Dick Ouellette, calls him "the best all-around player I've ever had."

Ernie Johnson was named to the state championship All Tournament team after he paced Ottawa Hills to its second consecutive championship with a last-moment victory over Ypsilanti. The 6-8 center averaged 22 points and taps in numerous errant shots. It is hard to stop his push shot. He shoots 60 per cent from the floor and on defense blocks many shots. Johnson also grabs 12 rebounds a game.

Ken Brady is another giant. The 6-9 standout was the top scorer in the Saginaw Valley, pumping in 424 points for a 26.5 average. He scored more than 30 points nine times and grabbed 18 rebounds a game as Flint Central ran up a 17-3 record.

Possibly the best player in either the Detroit Catholic or public school league, 6-1 Tom Marsh this year became Northern's first player to top 1,000 points in three seasons. He averaged 27 points a game and was a fine outside shooter. An excellent student, Marsh has had offers from 50 colleges and universities, including Michigan, Davidson, Detroit and Michigan State.

Muskegon had one of its best seasons in 32 years and finished fifth in the AP poll. Much credit belongs to 6-2 Cal Tatum who averaged 24 points a game and 1,130 in his career. Coach Mike Murphy says Tatum is one of the best he has coached.

John Sark shot an amazing 64 per cent from outcourt and averaged 22 points and 18 rebounds a game. A year ago as a junior, the 6-6 center led Austin to the semifinals of the state championship. He has had numerous scholarship offers.

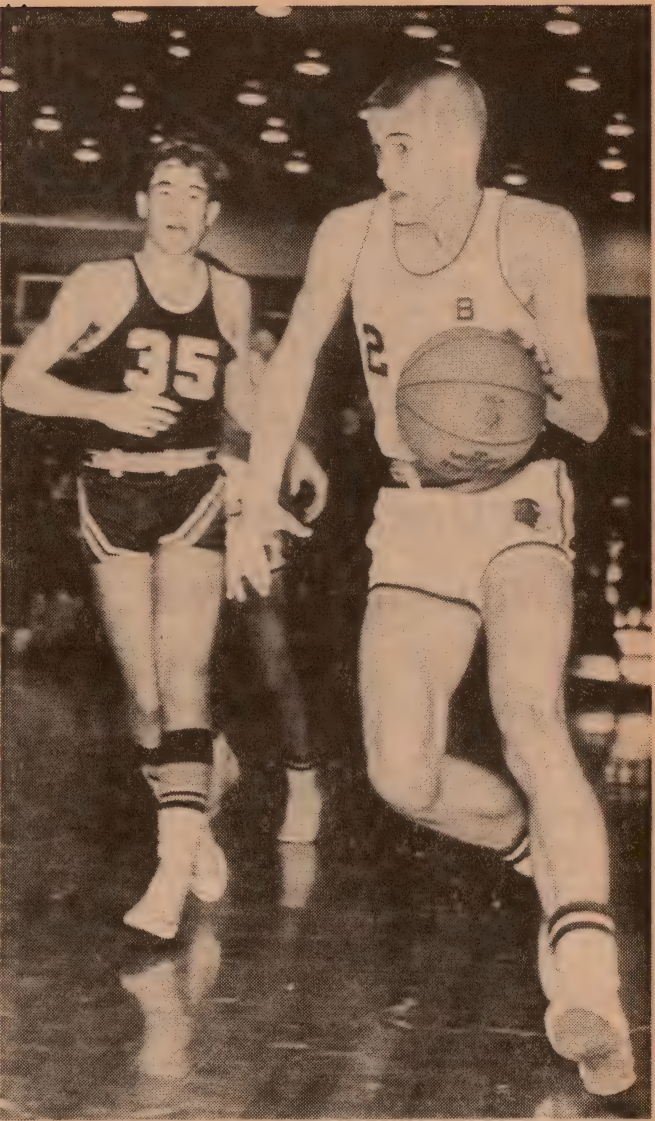

Also an All-State end in football last year, Leon Roberts is considered one of the best all-around athletes in Michigan. Baseball is considered his best sport, but in basketball this year the 6-2 standout scored 512 points for a 25.6 average in leading Portage Northern to a 15-5 record. In three years he has pumped in 1,327 points and grabbed 723 rebounds.

Blake Ashdown became the second greatest scorer in East Lansing history this season when he tossed in 336 points to bring his three-year total to 921.

The 20-point and 21-rebound average of Marvin Taylor sparked Mumford to the Detroit City League title and the semifinals of the state tourney. Coach Sam Taub says he is "potentially better than Larry Moore, who went to the University of Detroit."

The 6-9 giant is capable of jumping 12 feet on the boards.

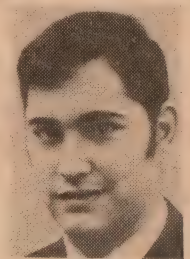

Only a junior, Doug MacKenzie has started on Fitzgerald teams that have racked up a 32-8 record in two years. As a sophomore he netted 357 points and this season he had 297 for a 20-point average.

You're still No. 1 with us

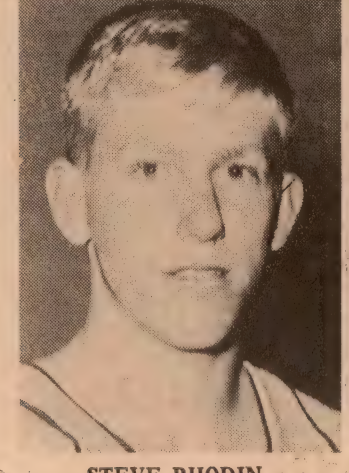

"You're champs with us!"

That was what the banner across the front of Dick Ouellette's house said late Saturday night. And after the long, mostly quiet ride home from East Lansing — when you had time to think about it — you felt like maybe that was really the way it was.

There have probably been few trips as depressing for the loyal followers of Ypsilanti High as the junket home from Saturday night's Class A championship game with Grand Rapids Ottawa Hills. The majority of these people were the ones who had followed the Braves through the season, all 22 victories of it.

They were the ones, not in uniform, whose eyes were filled with tears as they filed out of Jenison Fieldhouse following the 67-64 defeat. But why — why, after achieving a 22-1 record, was every one, including the players, so upset.

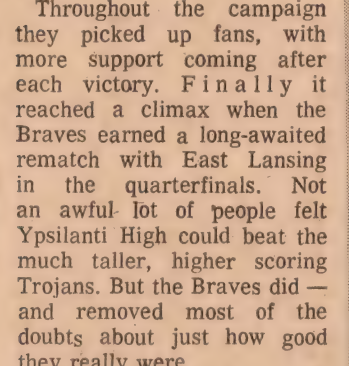

Pride. Quite a short word. But like the word "if," extremely long on meaning. The focal point of attention was the basketball team, not anything or anyone else. Every one was hurt for the team.

After last year's disheartening finale in the state championships there was a feeling of incompleteness. Even though the team had gone through its regular season undefeated and gone on to win 24 straight games, when the Braves lost the state title to Grand Rapids Ottawa Hills, they felt almost as though all their efforts had been wasted.

Those are the feelings which set the stage for this season's club. Three of its starters were on that team one year ago and they had one big thing in mind throughout the season—to prove that they were the champions.

It did not take long before those three — Bob Rhodin, Joe Frye and Robin Raymond — convinced the others on the team that they were truly serious contenders. Once each believed in the team as an entity the bandwagon began to roll.

Throughout the campaign they picked up fans, with more support coming after each victory. Finally it reached a climax when the Braves earned a long-awaited rematch with East Lansing in the quarterfinals. Not an awful lot of people felt Ypsilanti High could beat the much taller, higher scoring Trojans. But the Braves did — and removed most of the doubts about just how good they really were.

An interesting thing happened in that contest. Charles Fuller, a reserve forward, came off the bench to score 21 points and put most of the spark into the Braves' attack.

To some observers this may not have been a surprise, yet to no one could it have been really expected. But that is the way it was for the Braves this season — each of their regulars able to rise to a particular occasion and lead the team when it was needed.

Throughout most of the season it was their fine all-state forward, Bob Rhodin, but late in the season it was Joe Frye, whose two free throws won the regional title. Robin Raymond was the main force at Dearborn and also picked up the slack when Rhodin got into foul trouble in the semifinals and finals last weekend.

Then came the youngsters. Sid Frye and Steve Rhodin may be the best backcourt pair in the state — in any class. The fact that each competed in only his first year of varsity competition was not a well-known fact and their performances only made it more deceptive.

Playing alongside their older brothers had nothing but a good effect on them. Steve, the best free throw shooter on the team, showed a fine outside shot, and Sid's excellent driving skill makes him a strong possibility to move up to forward next season.

But the biggest thing was that they really guarded. Their tremendous ballhawking must draw the utmost credit for the Braves' top defense, which finished the season yielding only 50 points per contest.

So this is it, a group of kids, none of which is taller than 6-3½ (almost an unheard of thing in basketball today), who learned to work together and play together with but one true objective — to prove that they were No. 1.

They worked hard, very hard, to prove it. They compiled a 22-0 record prior to the state final, only to witness what they felt was everything seemingly go down the drain.

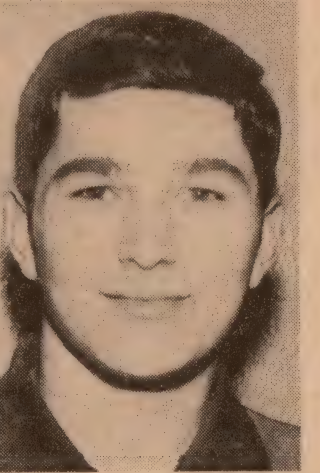

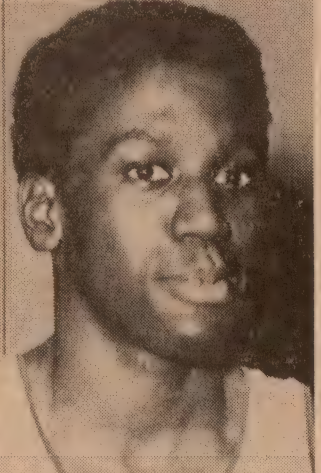

Well, that just isn't so.

They brought more credit to themselves, their school and this city than will probably be realized by most people for a long time. And after winning 24 straight games last year and 22 more this season, they certainly have nothing to prove to anyone!

It's like the sign on the wall of The Press' Sports Department says: "YPSI BRAVES 1ST WITH US."

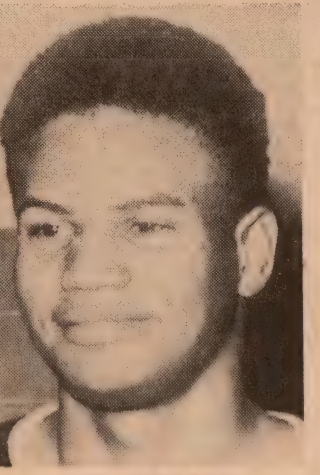

4 Class A cagers Receive mention

Ypsilanti High forward Joe Frye heads the list of four area cagers who have been awarded honorable mention on the Class A all-state team by the Associated Press. The others are Westland Glenn's Paul Chaveriat, Ron Daniel of Wayne Memorial and Belleville's Bob Fowlkes.

Doug MacKenzie, Warren Fitzgerald	6-3	Jr.

Area players receiving honorable mention: Joe Frye (Ypsilanti High), Ron Daniels (Wayne Memorial), Bob Fowlkes (Belleville), Paul Chaveriat (Westland John Glenn).

Frye, the older of the two members of his family on the Braves' team, came on strong at the end of the season. By sinking two free throws after time had run out against Ann Arbor Huron, he gave basketball fans a memory which will not soon be forgotten.

Chaveriat, a 6-1 forward, was also a late comer. Although he was only below double figures once throughout the entire season, since the beginning of 1969 he had really come on, with more than 20 points even times in 11 games, including a season high of 36 against Detroit Thurston.

Wayne Memorial's Ron Daniels led the area scorers for most of the season, but, after his 47-point performance against Dearborn Edsel Ford he started seeing some specially constructed defenses, made just for him.

Being the main scorer for the Zebras gave the opponents the opportunity to give him the special coverage, but he still finished the season averaging over 17 points per game and was named to the Sauk Trail League first team.

Belleville's Fowlkes, another all-league selection, had highs of 26 and 24 points and had 19 points in the Tigers' big upset of Livonia Bentley.

Snead trails 'Youngster' By one shot

MIAMI, (AP) — Sam Snead has a new putting stroke—his pool room special—and he says he feels like he's 16 instead of 56.

"I feel so good I believe I could go out and shoot a 50," the old Virginia hillbilly exulted after firing a five-under-par 67 Thursday in the opening round of the $200,000 National Airlines Open golf tournament.

Slammin' Sammy, who has won more than 100 tournaments in a career spanning three decades, found himself only one stroke off the record-setting pace of young Dewitt Weaver, out front with a 66.

He led such distinguished characters as Arnold Palmer, 69; Gary Player, 69; Bill Casper 70, Jack Nicklaus, 73, and Julius Boros, 73.

Directly trailing Weaver and Snead were seven pros bunched at 68—Australian Bruce Crampton, 41-year-old Lionel Hebert, Dale Douglass, Dick Sikes, Dave Stockton, Butch Baird and Frank Beard. There were 13 others with Palmer and Player at 69.

But everybody's eyes, entering the second round over the 6,927-yard par 72 Country Club of Miami course, were on the fabulous Snead.

Two groups Eye Pistons

DETROIT (AP)—Two groups of Detroit businessmen were reported yesterday to be negotiating to buy the Detroit Pistons of the National Basketball Association.

The Detroit News said one group includes Wayne Walker of the Detroit Lions and former teammate Darris McCord.

As Tigers lose another:

Lolich looks 'good'

CLEARWATER, Fla. (AP) — Mickey Lolich didn't look sharp Thursday. But the way the Detroit Tigers have been losing exhibition games lately his otherwise mediocre performance looked good.

He allowed two runs and nine hits in six innings as the Tigers went on to lose 5-4 to the Philadelphia Phillies in 12 innings.

Lolich, who walked four, seemed to be struggling from the start, although a pickoff play at first saved him one time and a leaping catch by Tom Matchick of a liner with two on got him out of a jam another time.

But the Phils came up with runs in the fifth and sixth to send John Wyatt to warm up in the bullpen.

"I don't think I could have gone much further," Lolich said. "I had to throw a lot of pitches because I was wild, though, and I threw the equivalent of about eight innings."

"I'm about where I want to be at this time of the spring," he added.

Despite the loss there were bright spots for Detroit. Willie Horton collected three hits and made a circus catch in the 10th inning to impress for the first time this spring. And Dick Radatz continued in his tough comeback bid by throwing two scoreless innings.

The game was won in the 12th when rookie Fred Scherman gave up a single and walk, then Matchick threw into the dirt at first on a grounder to allow the winning run to score.

Registrations will be held tomorrow at the Recreation Department offices at 214 N. Huron Road for Little League and Babe Ruth League baseball. The office will open at 8:30 a.m.

Wing hopes For playoffs Are ended

By the Associated Press

Now that they blew the playoffs, the Detroit Red Wings are facing a new horror—sixth and last place in the National Hockey League's Eastern Division.

The Red Wings, eliminated from the fourth and last Stanley cup playoff place by the Toronto Maple Leafs 4-2 Thursday, now must fight with Chicago over last two places in the East.

Detroit leads Chicago by three points, but the teams meet each other in their last two games of the season Friday and Saturday. If Chicago wins both, the Red Wings finish last.

Detroit's hopes of getting to the playoffs this year were dashed by the surging Maple Leafs, whose victory clinched their fourth-place finish.

Toronto, in fact, trails New York for third place by only two points. The Rangers and Maple Leafs meet each other Saturday in Toronto and again Sunday in New York.

Toronto got goals from Floyd Smith and Paul Henderson, two ex-Red Wings, to sink Detroit. Frank Mahovlich, who moved to Detroit in the big trade a year ago that sent Smith and Henderson to the Leafs, scored his 48th of the season, matching his previous single season career high.

Bob Pulford's goal at 16:08 of the second period proved to be the winning one, giving Toronto a 3-1 lead. Mahovlich scored in the third period, but three minutes later Smith added an insurance goal for the Leafs.

Southern Cal second:

Hoosiers lead swim

BLOOMINGTON, Ind. (AP). — "It looks like a two-team meet," Coach Doc Counsellman of Indiana said after the opening night of the 46th NCAA Swimming and Diving Championships.

He was being a nice host. To everyone else, it looked like the defending champion

Hoosiers had another title in the bag.

Indiana won four of Thursday night's five finals to roll up 152 points, Southern California, which took the other first, was second with 95 and Stanford was a distant third with 65.

Two U.S. records were broken by Indiana swimmers while three collegiate records and four meet records fell.

The Hoosiers' 400-yard medley relay team of Charlie Hickcox, Don McKenzie, Steve Borowski and Bryan Bateman set a U.S. mark of 3:25.8.

Indiana's Mark Spitz, an Olympian from Santa Clara, Calif., added to his list of records with an American mark of 4:33.2 in the 500-yard freestyle. He set the record in a qualifying heat when he edged Hans Fassnacht of Long Beach State, also timed in 4:33.2.

Spitz had swum the 500-freestyle only three times previously in competition. The old American record was 4:37, shared by Greg Buckingham of Stanford and Mike Burton of UCLA.

Southern Cal's Dan Frawley, a sophomore, pulled the biggest surprise Thursday in setting an NCAA and meet record of :20.81 in the 50-yard freestyle, breaking the old mark of :20.9 shared by Steve Clark of Yale 1964, and Zac Zorn of UCLA, 1968.

Hickcox, triple gold medalist from last year's Olympics, won his sixth NCAA individual title by capturing the 200 medley in a pool record 1:54.43.

Jim Henry, bronze medalist in the 1968 Olympic springboard competition, led Indiana to a sweep in the one-meter diving finals with 531.06 points.

More fishing seasons on the way

A sure sign that spring is on the way is a fisherman going after a trout in one of Michigan's many streams. Many trout streams will officially open April 26 and various other species will be added to those now available on April 5.

Lake Michigan coho are seized Because of excessive pesticides

He said he also will propose creation of a national commission to study the effects of pesticides, monitor their buildup, and stimulate research to find less toxic pesticides.

Nelson said vegetables and fruits on which DDT was sprayed directly have occasionally been pulled off the market.

But he said the salmon seizure represents the first case where a DDT concentration remained hazardous after traveling possibly hundreds of miles and going through half a dozen organisms feeding one on another.

"This very clearly shows how much of a staying power this particular pesticide has," Nelson said.

He said Coho salmon seizure orders are being prepared by the FDA for shipments located at the Wisconsin Cold Storage Co. in Milwaukee; the Midland Coop, Inc., in Superior, Wis., and at A. Kemp Fisheries, Inc., in Duluth, Minn.

Favorites defeated In Golden Gloves

KANSAS CITY (AP) — About the only thing that followed the form sheet in the windup of the 42nd National Golden Gloves Tournament Thursday night was Kansas City's team championship.

The host team captured the title with 19 points, two more than Cleveland.

In the individual title matches, however, favorites tumbled right and left.

Chief among the casualties were Lorenzo Trujillo of Grand Rapids, Mich., the only defending champion to make it past the first round; Mike Quarry, younger brother of pro heavyweight contender Jerry Quarry, and John Brown, of Detroit the fifty 156-pounder who had ousted Olympic bronze medal winner Johnnie Baldwin of Washington, D.C.

Walter E. Moore Jr., of Los Angeles repeated the feat of his father when he took the heavyweight championship with a second-round technical knockout over Ron Draper of Kansas City.

Moore's father won the Gloves heavyweight crown in 1943.

All women interested in taking the lessons are to register at West Junior High at 7 p.m. There will be eight sessions.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Gaylord Nelson says the government is seizing 21,000 pounds of Lake Michigan Coho salmon because of what he called dangerous levels of pesticide residue.

Nelson, D-Wis., said this week the Food and Drug Administration, which is ordering the seizure, found DDT concentrations up to 19 parts per million and concentration of a more toxic pesticide, Dieldrin, to be just short of three-tenths of a part per million.

The FDA tolerance level for both pesticides is zero, Nelson said.

The senator, who has been calling for a ban on DDT since 1965, said he will reintroduce legislation for it this session.

Michigan in Open:

People upset about bond monies

LANSING (AP) — State lawmakers are reporting that they are getting a steady drum-fire of letters and telephone calls from conservationists urging that the original 70-30 split of the $100 million recreation bond issue be retained.

The mail started to come in when Gov. Milliken announced he was recommending that only $40 million go for statewide conservation projects and $60 million to put into urban areas for parks.

Conservationists screamed, insisting there was a clear understanding before last November's election when the issue was passed that $70 million was to go to statewide projects.

There was even a breakdown. It went: $41 million for state parks, $18 million for fisheries projects, $7 million for wildlife projects and $4 million for forests.

The governor said that more than $30 million is needed to pour into the cities to combat urban unrest.

Rouman countered that no one denies this, but that was how it should have been advertised before the vote. He added that if the governor wanted to start a new bond drive to raise money for that purpose, MUCC would support it.

Interestingly, the United Auto Workers union, which originally opposed the recreation bond issue on the grounds it wasn't enough, is urging an even deeper bite. It wants $80 million to go into the cities, leaving $20 million for statewide spending.

Another sidelight is that Detroit and Wayne County, which would receive the bulk of any percentage allocated to the cities, defeated the bond proposal in November.

So you see, strong pressures are on to raid the fund for special interests, but the fact is you haven't seen anything yet.

The final determination of just how the money will be spent will be up to the Legislature. So, actually, what the governor and the UAW propose is purely academic. The proposals do, however, weaken the position of those who are trying to convince the Legislature it should leave the 70-30 split alone.

There is every prospect, unless a public outcry is raised, that some individual legislators will look at the $100 million as a source of revenue for some pet project in his home district.

The current mail campaign, which has not gotten into high gear at all, therefore has two purposes.

First, the letter writers and phone callers are trying to combat the recommendations of the governor, the big city officials, the UAW and all other interests who want more of the money to go into the cities than they are convinced the voters intended.

Second, they are trying to keep the Legislature from frittering the money away on meaningless projects designed only to enhance individual politicians' interests.

He urged concerned people to write "courteous, brief, sincere" letters to their own senator and representative as the best hope of preserving the integrity of the people's vote last November.

Cass Lake Gets salmon

LANSING (AP) — Some 200,000 Kokanee salmon fingerlings will be planted in Cass Lake, Oakland County, as soon as weather and ice conditions permit.

The Cass Lake release will be from all the young Kokanee the department has been able to rear from eggs collected at Higgins Lake last fall.

The State Department of Natural Resources said Cass Lake was selected for the experimental planting because it is a relatively small, fertile body of water.

Lamprey Attacks Increase

MILWAUKEE, Wis., (AP)

— Attacks by sea lampreys on Lake Michigan fish have increased sharply in the past year, study committees appointed by the Great Lakes Fisheries Commission were told Wednesday.

Lamprey scars, marks left on a fish after it has been attacked, were said to have increased 30 per cent in the last year on lake trout.

James D. Moore of Michigan said the most serious incidents of lamprey scarring are taking place in northern Lake Michigan.

Springtime often brings Out energy in homeowner

By VIVIAN BROWN
AP Newsfeatures Writer

A sure sign of spring is house fever. People talk among themselves and they begin to plan improvements. "What do you think about painting an early American house in a yellow color, or what color would you suggest?" asks one reader. The family has bought a beautiful old house that needs many repairs. But they want to make it look pretty outside, before they attempt to work indoors. They have put in the new windows, and repaired the roof.

Yellow is a very tricky color especially when it is used in large areas. It can be beautiful and lively, but it can be sickly, non-descript. It changes in various lights. Yellow has lots of charm, but it isn't the best color for a big old house. A very, very pale yellow might be pretty, but when it fades, it may become drab.

Old houses should be painted in soft colors or white. Paint store catalogs show some of the new exterior paints that are especially attractive for old houses.

The champagne colors—ivories with a bit more zip—are lovely on aged dwellings. But there are pretty blues, greens and grays that can put an old house back in the limelight.

It costs a great deal to paint a big house—this family says it was quoted $3,500—so it is wise to play with many paint samples until you are sure.

An anxious handyman is in the mood to build a swimming pool dressing room for the family, and is trying to find an interesting design that will not be too expensive.

One idea would be to build a sauna dressing room. The sauna could be used at other times and in summer the room could be a very adequate dressing room. People use saunas in the cold weather and if one can take it, there is nothing like a sauna bath and a cold water plunge, they say. Lumberyards can provide plans for saunas.

A sweet little poolside dressing room could be made from one of the little Japanese tea houses that are imported for garden use.

One woman wants to build "cat traps." She says that last spring her family made beautiful bird houses, only to find that "cats did away with birds." They mounted the houses about three feet above the ground along their driveway, hoping the birds would nest in them.

Cats are much maligned animals and as natural predators should be no more condemned for eating a bird placed within their reach than a dog should be for grabbing a rib roast beef the family left within its grasp.

Bird houses set only three feet above ground can provide a juicy meal for anything that can reach their contents. A garter snake can coil up a six-foot pole to reach a feeder. One family peeking into a bird house to see whether a bluebird had laid its eggs, found a snake sunning itself. Fortunately, the bluebird was unscathed and returned with a brood after the house was thoroughly desnailed.

Squirrels are the sneakiest of all bird robbers, usually attacking nests of baby birds in the trees when they are left alone.

Instead of building cat traps, one could put cone-shaped metal collars at the bottom of bird house poles to discourage cats, snakes and other animals.

Open door weather ahead:

Get those screens ready to go

Although screens with aluminum frames are widely used nowadays, the old-fashioned wooden screen continues to stand between most of us and the billions of wee beasts that infest the night.

The screen is a fairly vulnerable article, constantly exposed to the weather and subject to many kinds of damage by children, dogs and pointed objects. When a screen has developed a small hole, you can repair it with one of the screen patches available at a hardware store or lumberyard. But if you don't like the idea of a patch or if the screening is too far gone, you may want to do a rescreening job.

Screencloth—or mesh, screening, whatever you like to call it—comes in many types, including galvanized iron, copper, aluminum, bronze, fiberglass and various kinds of plastic. Choose the same cloth for the repair as you have on the rest of your screens. If necessary, take a piece of the old screening to the store to obtain the proper match.

To remove the old mesh, use a putty knife or other flat tool to pry up the narrow molding that runs along the inside of the frame. If the molding is in good shape, it can be reused. When the molding is off, you will note that the mesh is held down by tacks or staples or by what appears to be twine laid in a narrow channel.

When you buy the screening, be sure it's wider than the inside of the frame, since you'll need a workable margin on all four sides. If cutting has to be done, use tin snips or an old pair of shears, the larger the better. The hardest part is to get the mesh on tight and flat. Here's an old-fashioned method that works:

Lay the frame on a flat and sturdy surface like a workbench or table. Place two boards about one inch thick under the ends of the frame. Use a pair of clamps to bend each side of the frame downward until it reaches the top of the flat surface. Attach the mesh. When the clamps are removed, the screening will automatically become taut as the frame springs back into place. However, there are some mesh materials of the newer types, such as fiberglass or plastics, that should not be stretched tightly. Consult your dealer about this.

Once the new mesh is in place, trim away ragged edges so that nothing will show outside the replaced molding. If you bought new molding or if the old molding needs a new finish, paint it before you put it in place. In that way, you avoid tedious efforts to paint the molding without running over onto the new mesh. If the frames need repainting use a small oval-shaped brush. In painting the mesh, use an applicator—a piece of felt attached to a flat block of wood or metal. Thin the paint sufficiently to prevent clogging the mesh apertures. Keep a toothpick handy. If any clogging occurs, use the toothpick at once before the paint begins to harden.

Some hints To assist At home

by ANDY LANG
AP Newsfeatures

From various sources come these bits of information of interest to the homeowner:

The Veterans Administration estimates that it will guarantee 250,000 home loans this year, about 50,000 more than expected before the increase in the maximum FHA-VA home loan interest rate to 7½ per cent. The U.S. Commerce Department has ruled that only clay or shale units fused by heat can be called simply "brick." The decision means that similar products must be designated by another word in front of brick, such as flyash brick, concrete brick, etc. William Casey, chairman of editors of the Institute for Business Planning, reminds homeowners that casualty deductions should include not only the cost in repairs but any possible decline in the value of the property. The golden anniversary of the first real estate license law in the United States will be observed in Oregon on May 23 during National Realtor Week.

Saw an ingenious tool "rack" the other day in a neighbor's workshop; hanging from the basement ceiling was an ordinary chain, with S hooks attached at intervals to hold small tools, paint brushes and accessories. The use of veneers and colors has produced a sizeable increase in the sales of steel entranches for residential buildings. More open planning in interior design is said to be possible through the use of special hidden connectors which eliminate the need for extra load-bearing walls and permit the use of laminated wood beams for support uprights. With the American supply of walnut wood decreasing each year, the Agricultural Conservation Program is sponsoring a program under which farmers and woodlot owners are reimbursed for much of the cost in growing walnut trees. One authority says that $1000 investment in walnut plantings this year should bring a return of $1 million within 50 years.

That slogan about a "bathroom fit for a queen" may or may not have some connection with the fact that, until Queen Victoria decided otherwise, there wasn't a single bathroom in Buckingham Palace. Wood siding preferably should not contain knots or sappy streaks, but if it does, clean them with turpentine and coat with a knot sealer before applying paint.

One of the newer types of plastic-faced hardboard has a textured, tapestry finish in tongue-and-grooved planking. The latest statistics show that the average house with an FHA-guaranteed loan sells for $18,808, is one-story, is built on a slab, has a two-car garage and more than one bathroom. Repeat: that's a portrait of the average FHA house.

Lock dedication Date changed

SAULT STE. MARIE (AP) — Samuel Platt, chairman of the dedication committee for the new Poe Lock, says the dedication of the lock has been moved from June 14 to June 26. Platt said the change in dates was made so the dedication would coincide with the program marking the 10th anniversary of the St. Lawrence Seaway.

Handyman's notebook:

Extra storage space Can relieve problems

Question—We are in desperate need of more storage space. The upper part of our garage would make a good area for storing all kinds of things, especially those that are used only once or twice a year. There are 2 by 8 overhead joists. Do you have any suggestions?

Answer—The two things you will need are flooring, securely attached along the tops of the joists, and a folding stairway to give you access to the newly created storage space. Purchase the folding stairway unit first, following the instructions that come with it for installation. The directions will advise you how to frame an opening. The flooring can be almost anything that is sturdy, such as plywood or hardboard, either one-half inch or three-quarters of an inch. The inexpensive grade will suffice.

Question—We hope to buy a house this summer. Everybody advises us to be sure the mortgage has a prepayment clause in it, but nobody gives us a clear definition of how it works except that it permits you to make payments ahead of time. Can you tell us something about it?

Answer—A prepayment clause enables you to pay off part or all of the mortgage without penalty. Mortgages guaranteed by the Federal Housing Administration and the Veterans Administration have these clauses. Conventional mortgages sometimes have them, sometimes they don't.

If your credit rating puts you in a good negotiating position when you obtain a loan, you usually can insist on a prepayment clause. There are advantages and disadvantages to paying off a mortgage ahead of time. Space doesn't permit detailing all the ramifications of prepayments, since they involve changing interest rates, but it can't do you any harm and it may prove beneficial to have such a clause in your loan agreement.

Question—I prefer varnish as a finish, but hate to use it because it takes so long to dry. Would it dry more quickly if I mixed it with shellac?

Answer—Don't try it. The result will be messy. Have you tried one of the quick-drying varnishes now on the market?

Insulation of windows Combats condensation

Condensation is a bothersome house ailment that often becomes serious. But, it can be avoided.

The problem occurs when warm, moisture-laden indoor air comes in contact with a cold surface (such as a chilled window pane) and turns to water. Symptoms are: fogged-up window glass and wet sills. Water damage to walls and floors often results.

Moisture on the glass can be avoided by installing storm sash over single-glazed windows, or by the more modern method of using wood windows with insulating glass. Moist air will not condense on a wood window with insulating glass except under extreme weather conditions—in which case storm sash over insulating glass is generally recommended.

The possibility of condensation is most likely when the humidity level of a home is relatively high—and, as a result, more comfortable and healthful. This is the case in electrically-heated homes, where the humidity level can be maintained at from 27 to 35 per cent. To forestall condensation and its consequences, many electric utilities advise insulating glass (or storm sash) with weatherstripped wood windows.

Life & Leisure: A guide for dedicated fun-lovers

What's at the movies tonight

THE SERGEANT: Rod Steiger lends characteristic power to this portrait of an army sergeant whose outward arrogance barely conceals a man torn by self-doubt and guilt. The film touches on such taboo subjects as homosexuality, but with the dignity and understanding necessary to justify them as an essential part of good cinema.—State

THE FIFTH HORSEMAN IS FEAR: Czech-made film which follows a Jewish doctor through the nightmare landscape of Nazi-occupied Prague. Artistically and technically superb, it blends symbol, incident and meaning to evoke the despair of human suffering and the power of human courage.—Fifth Forum

GREETINGS: Anti-establishment satire loosely wound on the theme of three youths passing time until they receive the inevitable "greetings" from their friendly draft board. Ranging from blackest comedy to sheer hilarity, the film is no less meaningful for the fact that it is also superbly entertaining. (X)—Fifth Forum

THE HEART IS A LONELY HUNTER: Carson McCullers' story of a deaf-mute too sensitive for the vulgar tragedies of this world, too compassionate for the people who inhabit it. A fragile film kept this side of sentimentality by Alan Arkin's flawless handling of the title role. —Martha Washington

HOT MILLIONS: Peter Ustinov ushers in the era of technologically advanced crime with a foolproof scheme for computerized embezzlement. Add to basic story line a high sense of comic flair and — Q.E.D. — a smashingly funny movie well worth anybody's evening. — Willow Drive-in

BLOW-UP: Michelangelo Antonioni's masterful handling of a photographer's accidental glimpse of a murder. All technical aspects — particularly the use of photography and music — blend into a solid organic experience which keeps you emotionally and keeps you probing intellectually. David Hemmings and Vanessa Redgrave, both excellent. — Algier's Drive-in

WAIT UNTIL DARK: Audrey Hepburn stars as a blind girl involved in a lethal game of blindman's buff with several desperate criminals. Generally routine chillerama, saved at the end by one of the most genuinely horrifying moments on the screen. — University Drive-in 2001: A SPACE ODYSSEY: Spectacular cinema effects have made Stanley Kubrick's futuristic epic one of the most well-deserved hits of the season. The relative absence of dialogue and narrative only increases the visual magnificence of a film which challenges all the unique possibilities of the film media. — Quo Vadis

RIOT: Filmed in the Arizona State Prison, the film aspires to a realistic recreation of the anger and frustration which drive inmates to a desperate bid for freedom. Unfortunately, realism has been interpreted to mean unrestrained violence, slapdash editing, weak acting and inadequate characterization. To quote Time, the film "is as effective as a convict chorus of 'Don't Fence Me In.'" — Ypsi-Ann Drive-in (with "Samson and Delilah"), Wayne Drive-in (with "Red Line 7000" and "Rowan and Martin at the Movies")

SUPPORT YOUR LOCAL SHERIFF: A Western to end all Westerns... and it probably will, as it methodically reduces all the standard genre clichés to utter hilarity. James Garner plays the "stranger," Walter Brennan, "the vicious outlaw" and Joan Hackett, "the sweet young thing" in a film which is really too witty and intelligently amusing to claim a 'G' rating. — State-Wayne

RACHEL, RACHEL: A chronicle of human failure, of the perpetual spinster who turns everything she touches to sterility and defeat. Paul Newman's first attempt at direction may well establish him as an artist in a second field, while Joanne Woodward's performance proves, once again, her virtuosity as a character actress. — Martha Washington

CHARLY: Sensitive story of a mentally-retarded man given a second chance by a miraculous brain operation, and eventually plunged back into darkness when the new advance proves temporary. An easy candidate for embarrassing pathos, the film is saved by dedicated low-key direction and Cliff Robertson's almost loving portrayal of the ill-fated hero. (G) — La Parisien, Michigan

THE NIGHT OF THE FOLLOWING DAY: Marlon Brando has once again found a film worthy of his talents in Hubert Cornfield's chilling study of the pathology underlying the kidnapping of a young girl. Psychological acuity is matched by technical brilliance in a film which ranks among the best thrillers in recent memory. — Quo Vadis Penthouse II.

FACES: The story of a marriage in the process of collapse, John Cassavetes' film focuses on a quartet of sad, frustrated people trying desperately to convince themselves that they are having a good time. Painfully and embarrassingly intimate, the film's great strength lies in the fact that the audience continues to watch what they would prefer not to, and comes away with a greater sense of identification than they might wish to feel. — Campus

BULLITT: Director Peter Yates has taken two movie clichés—the grimly honest cop in a corrupt world and one-dimensional "star" Steve McQueen — and made them both work. Artistically and technically superior; a cinema triumph. (M) Quo Vadis Penthouse I

THE IMPOSSIBLE YEARS: Take a perplexed parent unable to understand a rebellious 17-year-old daughter, throw in adolescent love interest with the boy next door, and put David Niven's production on the line. It all adds up to another family situation cliché, rescued from the mundane only by superior acting and very clever direction. (G) — Willow and Algier's Drive-ins

THE FOX: Sandy Dennis, Anne Heywood and Keir Dullea turn in fine performances as the participants in a slightly macabre love triangle. The film distorts the original Lawrence story with an unnecessary emphasis on the more sordid aspects of the pervading sexual tension, but it is handled well enough to become a viable artistic alternative. — University Drive-in Kenneth Walsh heads the cast of a powerful new "Hamlet" by the Stratford National Theater of Canada which opens a limited Ann Arbor engagement this evening at the Mendelssohn Theater.

Our best to you...

HAMLET: A play open to as many interpretations as there are productions, the "Hamlet" of the Stratford National Theater of Canada promises to present a radically new slant on the Shakespeare classic. Director John Hirsch has tried to stage a realistic, rather than a theatrical "Hamlet"; he focuses on the pragmatic situation, as well as the Prince's inner turmoil, and attempts to recreate 12th century Denmark as a chaotic, not-quite civilized backdrop for the political action of the play. After a number of recent "Hamlets" that seemed concerned with invention for its own sake, the Stratford production should be a welcome return to realistic theater. — Lydia Mendelssohn Theater, S. Ingalls, Ann Arbor; 8 p.m. curtain; tickets from $2 to $5.

A LION IN WINTER: Friday at 7 and 10 p.m.; tickets $1.75

DR. FAUSTUS: Christopher Marlowe's story of the man who sold his soul to the devil in exchange for the pleasures of the earthly realm. Produced by the world-famous Royal Shakespeare under the direction of Clifford Williams. — Fisher Theater, Detroit; 8:30 p.m. curtain; tickets from $3 to $6.50.

AN ITALIAN STRAW HAT: "The horse that ate the hat" is the object of an epic pie-in-the-face chase in this delightful musical farce by Eugene Labiche. Produced by the EMU Players under the direction of P. George Bird with choreography by Virginia Koste. — EMU Quirk Theater; 8 p.m. curtain, tickets from $2 to $5

THE GRAPHIC ART OF ROLF NESCH: An innovator in print media techniques, Mr. Nesch has poured some forty years of work into developing the print to a point of textural artistry. The current collection contains more than 150 of the artist's pieces, including many of the prints and plates from which they were originally cut. An exciting exhibit, broadened by the addition of a lecture on March 25, on different aspects of Nesch's accomplishment. —Detroit Institute of Arts, 5200 Woodward; through April 27 with galleries open Wednesday through Sunday from 9:30 a.m. to 5:30 p.m., Tuesday from 9:30 a.m. to 9:30 p.m.

'Passion' Music set At U-M

"St. John Passion," Bach's choral interpretation of the Passion story, will be performed for the first time at the University of Michigan in a concert next Wednesday in Hill Auditorium. The 8 p.m. concert will be open to the public without charge.

Under the direction of Maynard Klein, the University of Michigan Choir, the Arts Choral, the University of Michigan Symphony Orchestra and the 80-voice Medical School Glee Club will combine to sing the chorus section.

Featured soloists will include soprano Eva Likova, contralto Katherine Hilgenberg, tenor Oscar Henry, bass John Henkel, tenor Waldie Anderson as the Evangelist, bass Willis Patterson as a Christ and baritone Antonio Perez as Pilate. Robert Clark will play the organ accompaniment.

One of Bach's early works, the "St. John Passion" is tighter than the more famous "St. Matthew Passion." It employs the same format, however, using the actual words of the biblical text.

Duchess held For protest

MADRID (AP) — The duchess of Medina Sidonia has started serving 12 months in jail for staging an illegal anti-American demonstration.

The demonstration was at Palomares, scene of a crash in 1966 by a U.S. bomber carrying nuclear bombs.

The duchess was sentenced in 1967, but a series of court appeals delayed her jailing until Thursday.

Dearden favors renewal

DETROIT (AP) — The Most Rev. John F. Dearden, named a cardinal by Pope Paul VI today, has been guiding the renewal of the Roman Catholic Church in America since November 1966 when he became the first elected head of the National Conference of Catholic Bishops.

As such, he has followed the winds of change emanating from the Second Vatican Council called by Pope John XXIII — from his interest in the ecumenical movement to using English instead of Latin in the Mass.

"I am sure you cannot pray the Our Father any more devoutly in Latin than you can in English," he said recently.

An archbishop of Detroit, he has demonstrated great energy in attending to the needs of the impoverished.

Last year, he raised $1 million to help the residents of the Detroit inner city, which was torn by a riot in 1967.

He also has urged wealthy parishes to show more interest in the plight of the inner city parishes. In the spring of 1965, he launched "Project Equality" in which all contractors who do business with the archdiocese signed a pledge that they would not discriminate in hiring or firing workers.

Dearden said he always felt close to the working man, since his father was a factory worker. Dearden worked in an ice house while he was in high school.

Archbishop Dearden, who dislikes his nickname of "Iron John," was born in Valley Falls, R.I., Oct. 15, 1907, the oldest of five children. His father, descended from New England Protestant stock, became a convert to the Catholic faith before his death in 1926.

When he was 11, his family moved to Cleveland.

A great influence on him as a student at Cathedral Latin High in Cleveland, Ohio, was a Latin teacher, the Rev. Edward Mooney. Father Mooney went on to become Detroit's first cardinal.

During his second year of high school, Archbishop Dearden came home one day and told his mother, Agnes, that he had decided to become a priest.

In 1925, he enrolled in St. Mary's Seminary in Cleveland, where he later became professor of philosophy and rector. His brilliance in theology attracted the attention of his superiors, who sent him to the renowned Gregorian Pontifical University in Rome.

He was ordained in Rome on Dec. 8, 1932, and remained for postgraduate work that earned him the degree of doctor of sacred theology.

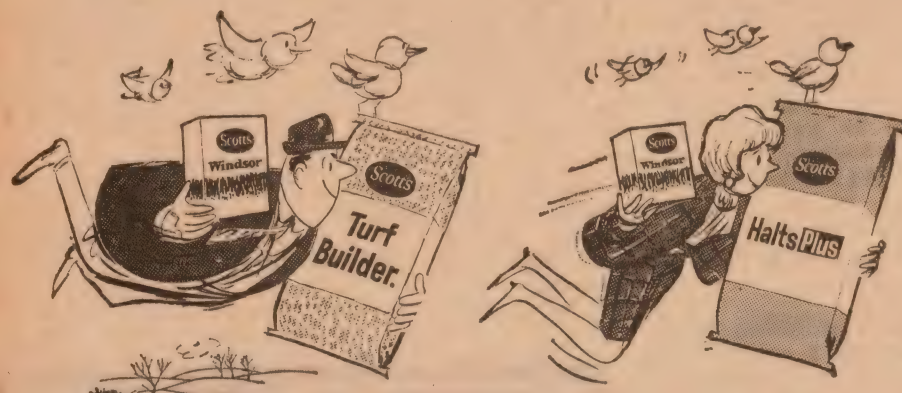

The 6-foot, 2-inch, 190-pound priest received his first and only parish assignment at St. Mary's Church in Painesville, Ohio, for three years, before joining the seminary faculty.

In 1948, he was named coadjutor bishop of Pittsburgh. On Dec. 18, 1958, he was named to succeed his friend and teacher, the late Cardinal Mooney, as head of the Detroit archdiocese.

He helped earn his nickname of "Iron John" when he first came to Detroit and said he did not believe priests should drive Cadillacs. There were soon very many Cadillacs on the used-car market.

Dearden, who admits he is not an orator, sat through nearly 10 months of the first three Vatican Councils before he made his first speech. It dealt with the need for family unity and drew much favorable comment from his fellow bishops.

He helped leave open to future debate a decision on the whole matter of birth regulation.

Labor party Due for defeat?

LONDON (AP) — After a stunning electoral defeat Prime Minister Harold Wilson's Labor government appeared to most political commentators today to be destined to lose the next general election no matter what it does.

Thursday's rout, in which Conservatives swept three special parliamentary elections, gave the Labor party the longest run of special election defeats of any party in the 20th century.

More immediately serious for Wilson was an open challenge to his policies from Home Secretary James Callaghan, one of the party's big five. He came out against government proposals for trade union reform, including strike vote and a 28-day cooling-off period before major strikes, and compulsory arbitration in interunion disputes.

Wilson's supporters accused Callaghan of trying to get union backing so he could try to replace Wilson.

In the voting Thursday, the Conservatives captured one London seat previously held by a Laborite and retained two others in the traditionally Tory seaside resorts of Brighton and Weston-Super-Mare. The setback left Labor with a 71-seat majority in the 630-member House of Commons, still a safe margin but 27 less than it had after the last national election three years ago.

The news was radioed to the prime minister in Lagos, where he is holding talks with Nigerian leaders.

Labor party officials in London pointed out that Wilson doesn't have to call a general election until the end of his five-year term in 1971. By that time, they predicted, the government's unpopular austerity programs will have borne fruit and Labor supporters will return to the fold.

you about 500 bucks.*

It's simply a matter of arithmetic. Say you're about to buy a new water heater. You have two choices. Gas or electric, right? Wrong. Once you read the facts you'll find that Gas is the only choice. And here's why: Gas heats water faster for about 1/2 the cost of electricity. For the sake of argument, say you have two hot water heaters. A 40-gallon Gas heater. And an 80-gallon electric. Well, the truth is, that the 40-gallon Gas heater will produce more hot water than the 80-gallon electric for 1/2 the cost. That alone could save you as much as 50 dollars a year. And in ten years, that's roughly 500 dollars. Like we said: do you really have two choices? Bet you 500 bucks you don't.

An unscheduled appointment

By JEANNE MURRAY HILL
Nurse and Housewife,
Scottsdale, Arizona

My flight home from a brief trip to New York had been a pleasant one—up until the last half-hour. Then, for no reason at all, apprehension began to gather in me like the dark clouds of the turbulence we'd just passed through over Texas.

But the turbulence hadn't unnerved me. After 15 years of being a nurse, it takes a lot to rattle me. That's what was so strange about my unease.

When the pilot announced, "We passed through the turbulence easily with only a small time loss," my hand shook so that I spilled my coffee. One thought flashed through my mind like danger signal: "We'll be late landing in Phoenix."

Why worry? I asked myself. I wasn't trying to make plane connections. I was just going home.

My husband and children would be in no hurry. It had long been a practice in our family to make meeting planes a family-fun occasion. The children enjoyed watching the other planes land before the special plane was met. Then we would always have Cokes together in the airport before going home.

So, there was no reason to be upset over being a few minutes late, I chided myself. That thought was followed by the warning, "Hurry!"

LENTEN GUIDEPOSTS

For the next 15 minutes I sat, belongings in hand, waiting to land. Soon below us Phoenix was a glistening canopy of lights in the black night.

"When will we land?" the man behind me asked the stewardess. "Are we very late?"

"Any minute now," she answered, checking her watch. "We'll be about four minutes late." Her words sent a chill through me. "You should be down there now!" But what possible difference could four minutes make?

Yet, I felt it again. "Hurry up. Get out your baggage stubs." The words were felt more than actually heard, so definite this time that I obeyed without question. The plane landed safely and taxied to the terminal.

When the "fasten your seat belts" sign flashed off, I jumped out of my seat and scrambled down the ramp. I was glad to see my family well and safe. But still that didn't relieve my feeling of anxiety. A stronger force was now guiding my very footsteps.

I barely kissed the family, scooped up my 4-year-old into my arms and kept walking. My husband glanced at me questioning when I headed away from the restaurant, the scene of our usual gab-fest.

"I need to get my baggage," I called over the children's heads. They followed me reluctantly toward the baggage depot. There I could see my two blue suitcases, but something else caught my eye!

Three feet in front of my bags was a small cluster of people around a wheelchair. "Hurry up! Go to him! You're late!"

I ran to the group and pushed my way through. A man in his 60s lay slumped in the chair. His skin was ashen.

"He's got a chronic lung condition, but he's never been this bad before," said the man's wife, her voice shaking.

"I'm a nurse," I said. I examined the man. He wasn't breathing. There was no pulse. I put my ear to his chest; I thought I heard a very faint heartbeat.

"Dear God, help me," I said under my breath, then aloud:

"You! Call an ambulance," I pointed to a young man in the tiny gathering. To another I said, "Call the Fire Rescue Squad."

"Louis," I turned to my husband, "help me get him to the floor."

Once the ill man was flat on the floor, I began mouth-to-mouth resuscitation, alternately blowing, resting, not daring to stop. By the time another nurse, also a passenger, arrived on the scene, an occasional beat of the man's heart could be felt in the pulse at his wrist.

The additional nurse and I were able to massage the heart externally. We continued mouth-to-mouth resuscitation until the Fire Rescue Squad came with an oxygen unit. Then a passing doctor arrived to help us. By now, the ill man's pulse was becoming more and more frequent.

When the ambulance arrived 10 minutes later, his color had changed from ashen to life-pink.

My children, who had stayed off to the side, out of the way, joined my husband and me as we watched the ambulance drive off.

"I've got your suitcases, mom," my son said.

"Thanks," I murmured, and then I said another heartfelt "thanks" to that voice I'd felt — to One Who knew that four minutes made the difference between life and death.

A phone call to the hospital the next day reassured me that the man would fully recover. I've recovered too — recovered my faith that over the years had become so casual I no longer expected the type of guidance that came to me on the airplane.

Yet, I know now that God can speak to us in many ways. He can even nudge us to hurry when he has a job for us.
